REASONS TO SELL RIGHT NOW!

During the past few years, low interest rates, war, and an uncertain stock market combined to push many collectible prices to their highest levels ever. Now, in these uncertain times, the stock market, bank problems, and government bailouts, are starting to hurt those markets. We have studied the investment and collectibles markets for decades, and in uncertain times, and a threat of deflation - there are dramatic price declines in many areas of jewelry, coin, and collectible markets - which is why this may be the best time in decades for you to sell, for some of the highest prices ever. Honoring the Artist: Joe Chierchio

The lure of nostalgia has never been stronger than it is now in these days of financial crisis and discontent. Yet cover artist Joe Chierchio is not one to paint subjects just because they reflect a relevant time and place. Chierchio's images respond to his own childhood growing up in Brooklyn and his love of the past.

They also represent his penchant for storytelling and distinct way of capturing an important moment in the life of a person, event or environment. Whether he is conveying a big city at night, in works like "Late Shift Diner" and "Last Train," or small town life in "Barbershop" and "Sag Harbor Cinema," Chierchio adds a personal touch to every scene.

Q: What do you think is appealing about the cover?

A: The barber was one of the nicest persons in town. He gave us boys our first haircut. Going there was fun. And he gave us a lollypop.

Q: Getting a first haircut was a rite-of-passage, too. Did your barbershop have a red and white pole outside?

A: You bet. I still remember the one I went to, Louie's OK Barbershop, in Brooklyn. Everyone had their own shaving mug on a shelf. It was also a wonderful meeting place, like a diner.

Q: I know you have painted a lot of diners.

A: Yes, I did a series called "The Regulars." There were three people at a counter reading a newspaper. We're wondering what they're reading.

Q: Besides what they are reading, how about why they are reading?

A: In my art, people are not just sitting around. They have things to do. They have chores. If it's not so explicit as to why they are doing things, viewers can read into it. And they can say, "I had a moment like that."

Q: That's what makes a good narrative or story. I have a feeling that your own personal life is filled with doing things, activities.

A: Yes. I work on several things at a time; I like to keep busy, painting, going to galleries, having dinner with friends. But I don't read. I'd rather do an art work or see a film or watch TV.

Q: Talk about your various projects, you are working on a series about Coney Island.

A: When I was growing up, this was our Hamptons. It was a great escape; we would bring a blanket, go swimming, go under the boardwalk where the Bop House was. We'd dance and party, get out of the heat.

Q: How about the mixed media project you're doing? It presents other kinds of challenges.

A: I am doing works with two media, photography and art. A photographer friend is doing the photographs, and I'm doing the art. The style is like Film Noir and Pop Art. Sometimes the images have a comic book feel, with strong colors. I'm working now on something called "Horsing Around." The narrative has sexual overtones: a couple is in bed where the woman has the upper hand. She's in the driving seat. There's a hotel sign outside the window.

Q: So what's your primary purpose in painting an image?

A: I try and create moments in paint.

Beach Dogs

Dog Bites, Lawyers and other East Hampton Beach Stories

By Dan Rattiner

When I was a boy growing up, we were taught that if someone kicks sand in your face at the beach you should beat him up. There was an advertisement in all comic books and magazines that ran for years that promotes that. It was a cartoon strip. In the first few panels, a big bully kicks sand in this little fellow's face and the little fellow can't do anything about it. So his girlfriend jumps up and walks off with the big bully.

In the second group of panels, this same bully comes by and the little guy is lying there on the blanket with his girlfriend and the bully kicks sand in his face. But this time, the little guy jumps up and we see he is all muscle-bound. He punches the bully.

"Ow," says the bully, running off crying.

"Oh Joey," sighs the girlfriend.

This comic strip was an ad for the Charles Atlas Method of getting yourself into shape. There was a magazine to subscribe to and some equipment you could buy.

Today if someone kicks sand in your face and calls you a name, you call your lawyer.

On the beach as elsewhere, you are always in danger in one way or another.

With that in mind, I would like to present two dog stories, one about to go to court in Amagansett, and another which has already gone through court in East Hampton. The one in Amagensett involves a dog behaving badly and injuries, and there is no excuse for what happened. The other involves a happy little dog on a leash, a lack of signage and some Piping Plovers.

I would also like to point out to you that on the beach as elsewhere, you are always in danger in one way or another. If a seal comes ashore and you try to pat him you will get bit. If a Frisbee hits you in the nose you will have a broken nose. And if a dog kicks sand in your computer, well, I guess you just move. There's also the matter of surfboards and fishhooks. It's a dangerous world out there.

The first story is about a man and woman who were both bitten by a large dog.

The man and woman were walking westbound down the beach in Amagansett when they saw a female jogger approaching with a large dog. All were down by the water's edge. The jogger smiled. Her dog grwoled, ran ahead and over to the woman walker and knocked her to the ground, then jumped on her and began biting her on the neck. Her husband jumped on the dog, which then began biting him on the neck and chest.

"Hey, come back here," the jogger shouted cheerfully. The dog got off and ran to her obediently.

She ran by, not breaking her stride, then looked back over her shoulder.

"You two all right?" she asked.

The two walkers got up. "No," one of them said. They were bleeding from their wounds.

The woman waved again and strode along. Glad to hear everything was okay, seemed to be her message.

The couple followed the woman as she ran up the beach to the parking lot at Atlantic Avenue Beach nearby and her dog jumped into the back seat. Then she drove off, but not before the couple got her license plate number.

The court date is sometime this week. The male victim was a high-powered New York City lawyer named Sandor Frankel, according to Martin Ligornet, a friend who told me about this. The other victim was his wife Ruth Frankel. I put two telephone calls in to Mr. Frankel asking that he return them but so far he has not. I hope they are all right. And I hope Martin got this right.

The second story involves an East Hampton painter named Carol Saxe. Carol has a little tiny dog who wouldn't hurt a fly. She was walking him along the beach at a legal hour—there are legal hours to walk dogs and illegal hours when not to. There are many different activities down at the beach and they all have to be taking place so as to not interfere with one another. Ms. Saxe followed a path to the beach (a sign-indicated "path") and then walked her dog right down near the surf line. The tide was way out. It was quite beautiful out there.

At a certain point, a local East Hampton Village traffic control officer on a three-wheeled motorized vehicle approached and told her she was too close to an area staked off so piping plovers could nest, and he wrote her out a ticket for that.

The fine for being too close to a marked-off piping plover nesting area is $150 at minimum. Since Ms. Saxe felt she was wrongly ticketed, she decided to fight the ordinance in court.

Here is the account of her court appearance before Judge Catherine Cahill as she wrote it to me in an email.

Dear Dan:

I went to court with my well-researched and thought-out defense after having consulted friendly, free legal counsel.

I was dressed in appropriate business attire and had a folder of beautifully printed 8 x 10 photographs of the scene of the alleged crime, taken within 20 minutes of the violation; time and date recorded from my camera. I eagerly looked forward to the mini trial of the century where I would dazzle the court and win my case for all dog lovers of East Hampton.

However, I had been advised beforehand that the prosecutor would meet with me first and try to adjudicate the case without a trial. I hoped that he would be blown away and totally overwhelmed by my "evidence" and dismiss the case before trial.

This is what transpired. He immediately dismissed some of my legal arguments. The town claims they have jurisdiction into the ocean despite the New York state map showing the village boundary at the high tide mark. They also claim that the imaginary lines into the ocean and along the shore are enforceable. He was, however, very impressed by my photos which showed NO SIGN and showed a path along the water at low tide very far from any nesting area. He took these photos into a brief meeting with the teenage enforcer who had ticketed me, who confirmed my story. He agreed as to the path I had walked along the water line and confirmed that he had not seen me anywhere near the actual bird nesting site.

The prosecutor then offered to show my photographic evidence to Judge Cahill and to suggest dismissal. I raised some of the legal issues and he said that I could take my chances with a trial. I said, no, thank you and let him do his thing.

There was some whispering between the prosecutor and the Judge. I learned later that I should have been privy to the conversation and should have asked to be included. My hearing is not great, but I did hear some of it. Judge Cahill seemed very surprised by the photos…saying things like…"she was all the way over here…and the nests are way over there...this is really low tide…where is that fence…it really is FAR from the water…" She seemed to think a ticket was undeserved.

Then she ruled. I was offered a 6-month "probation." If I do not violate any dog ordinances on the beaches for six months, then the

Dunkin'

Donut Kings Just Might Succeed at this Unusual Spot

By Dan Rattiner

Dunkin' Donuts will open a new branch on the southwest corner of County Road 39 and North Sea Road. For those who have been watching this corner for the last 30 years, as one restaurant after another starts up there and then fails, there is the feeling of, well, of COURSE!

Everything has been tried. Since it was brought there on a truck around 1975, as one of those gleaming chrome diners, it's been everything the human restaurant mind can devise. There were high hopes for it when it first opened as a family restaurant called Southampton Diner. After that closed, it was Doobie's Diner, then after that closed, Pablo's, then after that closed the hot dog stand called Hiram's Hotdogs, then after that closed a new diner which, for some reason, the new owners thought should be named the Greasy Spoon, then, after that closed, someone had it clad with wooden paneling so it could become a Chock Full o' Nuts, then when that closed the re-incarnation of the diner called, incredibly, and once again, the Greasy Spoon (this time with waitresses), then, beginning around 2005, Starbucks. Starbucks closed down last spring. Now it is Dunkin' Donuts' turn.

Well, FINALLY! Something that will SUCCEED!

The problem, of course, has been this diner's location. It's one storefront in from the corner where these two big, four lane highways cross. And so it is virtually impossible to get to from any direction other than from the eastbound lanes.

It is, actually, perfectly positioned for those lanes. From the others, it's a big frustration. You might have it in your head to get a Mexican meal at Pablo's or a Starbuck's cappuccino, but unless your global position on the planet is eastbound of this building, forget it. It's just nearly impossible. From all other directions it involves, at a minimum, at least one left turn across four lanes and/or a drive past of half a mile and then a K turn. Forget it.

Southampton definitely needed a Starbucks in 2005. The problem was that the purchasing agents from Starbucks must have been shown that property on a day in the middle of January when there was no traffic. It looked good to the Starbucks guy, right there on the highway.

Trouble is that Starbucks is a place you go for contemplation, friendly talk and a good cappuccino. For this location, by the time you got there, you were so frustrated and pissed off in doing so that you had no great desire for either a cappuccino, friendly conversation nor contemplation.

HANGING THE BANKS ON THEIR OWN PETARD

By Dan Rattiner

When mortgage rates went way down a little over two years ago, I called the bank that holds the mortgage for the Dan's Papers office building in Bridgehampton to ask them about re-financing. The bank is Capital One. It was called North Fork Bank when I got the loan 15 years ago. But Capital One had gobbled up North Fork.

"Look in your North Fork files," I said, "It's in there. I think the rate is 7% or 7 1/2,% I'm really not sure. In fact, call me and tell me."

"We have no idea where your mortgage is," this banker told me. "All the mortgages have been sold and re-sold and re-sold. They get bundled together. Your mortgage could have been sold 10 times by now. I don't think that anybody knows who has it at this point. Except if you stop paying. Then somebody will surely make themselves known."

This was in 2007. A little red flag about Wall Street should have come up. But it didn't. I took it more personally.

"You SOLD my mortgage?"

This conversation came to mind the other day when I read about a new way that homeowners are dealing with banks who threaten to foreclose. The homeowners just don't pay the monthly payments.

"It's not MY problem," one woman said. "They're the people who broke their own rules to set this up. If I didn't qualify for this loan, why didn't they just tell me?"

"I thought I was getting a better rate," said a man. "But no. When we got to the closing there were so many fees and costs it was just the same as it was before."

"I don't know why they just won't settle with me," another man said. "When they foreclose, they get the house. The house is worth half what it was. I'm saying take half now, but they won't do it."

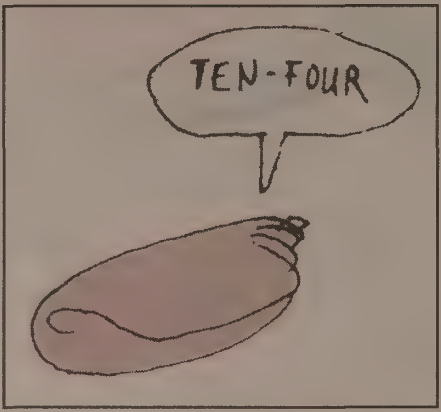
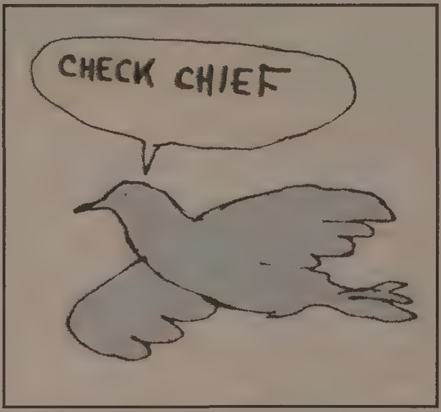
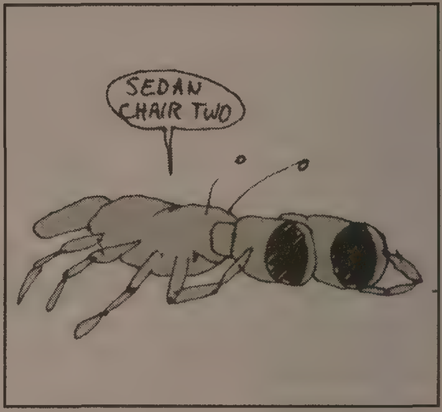
Ever Notice How Clams Make That Funny Whirring Sound?







This item first appeared in The East Hampton Summer Sun on August 9, 1973.

By Ed Nicastro

It all started on the beach when I heard a seashell say "10-4." Bert and I were doing our best to achieve a tan. Bert tanned, I burned.

"Say Bert, did you hear that seashell?"

"Don't let it bother you, it's bugged."

"Bugged! What for?"

"Well you might as well know. Staff members of the White House suspect you of un-American activities."

"Are you crazy! Where would they get that idea."

"Well, it has to do with your last name. Lots of people call you Nick, sort of a shortened form of Nicastro. Nick is from the old Greek word meaning "victory." Therefore you stand for Victory for Castro. Need I say more?" I was stunned. Immediately I sat up, while a suspicious-looking crab with binoculars passed by. "Does President Nixon know about this?"

"Of course not. Why he might put a stop to it if he knew. And that would hurt his chances of continuing as president."

"But he must get suspicious."

"Well, once he found a bug in a salad but he was told it was seasoning."

"And he swallowed that explanation."

"Yep, lettuce, bug, and all."

"That's insane." With that concluding remark, I relaxed. After all, it was ridiculous bugging me. Why, that would be like putting Joe Namath on a White House enemy list. So I rested peacefully, with no noise around me except the gentle splashing of the waves and a sea gull who kept saying, "check, chief."

The Inundation

Problems, Polluted Waters & a Breakdown on Shelter Isl.

By Dan Rattiner

It's certainly not something to be taken lightly. The British Petroleum Disaster in the Gulf of Mexico is the single greatest man-made disaster that ever happened.

And yet, there is something eerily familiar about what has been going on on Shelter Island in these last few weeks. It's as if some very bad playwright has taken the BP Disaster on the road, and given the result of his labors to a community theatre group on that island. Memorize these lines. It's got power and majesty. It's a play that theatergoers will never forget.

The plotline is familiar. Americans have a need that is unmet. The citizenry say to those in charge that something will have to be done.

Permits are issued. Machines are brought in, pumps are turned on and the problem is solved. Then something goes wrong. There's a breakdown. Perhaps an explosion. And then disaster. A liquid is released and is dispersed into the waters. And the shellfish and sea creatures die.

Of course, everything on Shelter Island is on a very small scale. The little theatre group is on a very tight budget, after all. And furthermore, events get a little backwards and sometimes make no sense—a problem with the script. For example in the case of Shelter Island, the authorities vote to deliberately pollute the waters to resolve a problem. Frankly, it's a pretty amateurish production.

Here's the story of Shelter Island. I call it The Inundation.

Sometime in March 2010, there are a series of very violent and very wet rainstorms in the area, particularly on Shelter Island. Huge amounts of water are dumped on the land. The result is flooding, not only in the low-lying areas, but high up in the hills, where if there is a swale in a hillside or a crease in a meadow, the water collects. It collects because the ground is saturated and the water leaks out of it. And there is this strange, almost unnatural situation where in many areas of Shelter Island, even high up, the roads are flooded and the farmland is flooded and the basements are flooded. Cars are being turned back. Crap in the basements begins to smell. Something will have to be done.

The powers that be, responding to the demands of the populace, decide to pump out all the floodwaters into the bay. One end of the hoses will be set into the floodwaters, filthy with all the crap that humans put on the land—pesticides, candy wrappers, oil dripping from car engines, overflows from gas pumps, cake boxes, turpentine, six-in-one oil and landscape chemicals, all of which trickle into the ponds—and the other end in the bay and attach a pump in the middle. The water will flow. And it will enter the bay, which will become polluted.

It will also solve the problem of the flooding.

It doesn't seem at first glance that this will work. The [illegible] water is moved into Peconic Bay nearby just a few hundred yards out. How does that help the Island? Won't it just flow back? Well, the pumped water is released at the bottom of Peconic Bay, so it is well below the water line on the land, and well below the surface of the water. Will it raise the sea level? Absolutely not. You can count on that. This dirty water is just a raindrop in the rain barrel of the world's oceans. Some of it, very little of it actually, will be swept away and out to sea, perhaps to be caught up in the same swoop of the sea current that is trying to get the BP Oil spill around the protuberance of Florida and up the Atlantic Coast toward, well, who knows? Well, that hasn't happened yet. Okay, so maybe it will raise the water level a billionth of an inch.

This is a sort of tense part of the play. But as you see, with the explanation, the tension is relieved, and we move on. We move on to the starting up of the pumps.

The decision is made, the signal is given and the pump engines are started and begin sucking. The waters flow. And the bay—anybody can see this—is growing brown and grey with the new polluted waters.

This was supposed to happen. But now somebody has sounded the alarm. The Environmental Protection Agency wades into the fray. The fish are endangered. The ducks are covered with, what, those plastic six-pack beer necklaces they can't get out of?

It's not a bad inundation yet, anyway. But for now, we have to do something. We can't ban the pumping—they've got all the permits and paperwork and permissions, so let's ban shell fishing. The fishermen cannot fish in this. What they come up with will be inedible. And so there is a scene in this play where the notices are tacked up on the telephone poles down near Coecles Harbor (named after the coecles) and Deering Harbor (named after the Deerings), that shell fishing is banned until further notice, until testing proves that those sea creatures who might have been affected by this inundation have either died from it or swum or hobbled painfully away leaving just good healthy lobsters and clams and oysters and crabs. Could happen in a couple of weeks. Or months. Or maybe years. We'll just have to see. How long do these damn creatures live

Who's Here

Elliot Rabin, Designer

By Janet Flora

Janet Flora

There is a new Peter Elliot Store on Jobs Lane. You may remember that this is not the first time a Peter Elliot Store has been in Southampton; there was one that closed more than seven years ago after a two-year presence. It is owned by Elliot Rabin, who owns Peter Elliot Men and Peter Elliot Women on Madison Avenue, as well as Peter Elliot Blue on Lexington

Rabin opened his first store on Second Avenue in 1977. He started that store with a partner who's first name was Peter. Thus the Peter Elliot name. But the partner soon decided he didn't want to be in retail and left Rabin with the store, no merchandise, and little money. Rabin said, "I asked my father who owned a retail store in Charleston, South Carolina for a loan, and he said, 'No I told you not to go into retail.'" When the partner quit and his father wouldn't lend him the money, Rabin said to his one employees, Larry Wertheimer, who was 17 at the time, "Come on. We're going to Southampton, and we're going to get something to sell."

They did make that trip to Southampton over July 4 weekend in 1977, and found themselves at Henry Lehr. At that time, Henry Lehr was selling a line called Go Silk and people were lined up outside to buy it. Rabin found where to buy the merchandise, took his last $5,000, and bought a lot of the same items being sold at Henry Lehr. Rabin and Wertheimer packed two checker cabs full of merchandise and opened for business the next day. In two months, Elliot Rabin had turned his $5,000 into $50,000.

Besides his good business acumen and determination, Rabin, a modest Southern gentleman who stands just 5'7", had a lucky break. "Larry Wertheimer's father was a game hunter and he gave us this old mangled lion's head," said Rabin. "It was the '70s; I wanted to be politically incorrect, so in my window I had a woman mannequin holding a rifle, with her foot on the lion's head, and I had a male mannequin's holding a camera. Well, soon after, an animal activist threw a brick through the window and my store ended up on the front page of The New York Times!"

> "I asked my father, who owned a store in Charleston, for a loan and he said, 'No. I told you not to go into retail.'"

However, it's not just determination, good business sense, and a little bit of luck that got the now 68-year-old entrepreneur where he is today. Before opening that first store back in 1977, the Charleston, South Carolina native was educated at The Citadel and the University of London, where he studied law. Rabin did not complete his formal education in London, but instead decided to hitchhike and see the world. The jaunt eventually took him to New York where his sister Eileen had settled. He began his retail career there, at Bloomingdale's, and then sharpened his designing talents at Pucci, Givenchy and Oscar de la Renta.

Certainly Rabin's experience in designing and retail became the foundation for his future success, but he credits something else as well: catering to the customer. Many of his customers have been coming back so many years that he now sees their children and grandchildren. The Peter Elliot stores have a 24-hour emergency service phone number for special clients and concierges at fine hotels. "It all started because one night in 1979 after 10:00 p.m., I was doing some paperwork and cleaning up and a businessman called the store in a panic because the airline had lost his luggage," Rabin said. "The man had an important meeting the next day. When I answered the phone the man said 'you must be the janitor.' I said, 'yes I am but I can help you, come on over.'" The businessman bought two suits that night, and three weeks later he came back and spent $10,000.

Besides the great merchandise that will be in the Southampton store, Rabin brings that love of retailing, and old-fashioned customer relations to Jobs Lane. "Nothing feels better than a customer who comes back wearing the same shirt after 15 years and tells me it's hard to wear it out," he said.

According to Rabin, the new Southampton store will be different. "The first Southampton store didn't work because I blew it. I introduced women's clothes into a space that was less than 600 square feet. That doesn't work. Men do not want to shop in a store that size that also has women's clothes," he said.

This new store will carry men's clothes only. Another departure is that in this store, Rabin has a partner and a brand new line of clothing. He and Chaz Bertrand of Atlantis Weather Gear have joined together to form Atlantis by Peter Elliot, which is the name of the store. Rabin says of Bertrand and his team, "These guys are brilliant at what they do; they're sailors, they know the sea, and they make the best sailing gear around." In fact, they have been contracted to design the gear for the United States' sailing team in the next summer Olympics. Rabin already sells Atlantis jackets and vests in his store in Manhattan. "Customers love them," he says, "they're good looking, practical and can go from sailing to skiing."

In addition to Atlantis outerwear, the Southampton store will carry sportswear, as well as Peter Elliot's signature cashmere sweaters and shirts from Italy, and some footwear like an all rubber sneaker that resembles the old Converse sneaker, and a rubber loafer that looks like an old Bass Weejun. What you won't find at Peter Elliot in Southampton or Manhattan is anything made in China. Rabin told me one of his retail mantras is: "Our merchandise is finer—ain't nothing made in China." Rabin also likes to quote the British economist John Maynard Keys who said, "Quality remains long after the price is forgotten." To that quote Rabin adds his own tag line, which is, "When there is value."

Rabin has been splitting his time between Manhattan and Southampton for years. He spends the early part of the week out East with his eight-year-old son Joshua, who attends Our Lady of the Hamptons school, and lives there with his mother Loreen Enright, a music and voice teacher.

Rabin cited another reason for his success over the years. "I couldn't do what I do without the team. I have an amazing supporting cast. My sister Eileen Sorota runs the women's store, my general manager Isabelle Hardy has been with me over 10 years, and Bill Wood is the interior/exterior designer in all my stores." By the way, Larry Wertheimer, the 17-year-old employee who helped load the checker cabs with the first merchandise to be sold, is still one of Rabin's dearest friends, "I practically raised him," Rabin said.

The day that I visited Rabin in the men's store on Madison Avenue he and his sister were preparing for a 'going away party' in the Women's store across the street for an employee who'd spent 10 years with the company—an unusual commitment in a small retail business.

Rabin is a formidable presence with a booming voice, a firm handshake and sparkling eyes. You're sure to recognize him if you see him in Southampton this summer with his signature shaved head and eyebrows thick as pelts of skin. He may just be wearing something by Peter Elliot for Atlantis.

record will be cleared. If I am caught violating a dog ordinance, then I will have to appear again in court and have to deal with both violations. I accepted the deal in order to avoid the fine.

What Judge Cahill cleverly did, as I see it, is that she supported the patrol officers who give these tickets and probably assumed that I would be happy as no fine was assessed.

What Judge Cahill did not do is address a poorly-written ordinance which is being improperly enforced. Had she done that, she would have forced the Town to write a better ordinance which would clearly define nesting areas and meet due process requirement for adequate notice.

Some food for thought…

The ordinance states that no person can enter the bird area yet there is a sign that says PATH…so by definition the fence can not denote a bird area, (running from dunes at a 90 degree angle to water which, unlike the actual nesting areas, does not enclose anything).

Birds cannot nest on sand that is underwater 20 hours a day, so the wet sand low tide area cannot be construed as a bird NESTING area.

If the birds are in danger at the shoreline where they feed, then the ordinance needs to be rewritten and clearly posted.

Sincerely, on probation,
Carol

Inundate

Then we have the dramatic moment. The explosion. After just one day of pumping, the pump sucking out the water suddenly wheezes and poops out. I know, I know. It's not on any mammoth scale. Nobody is killed. No great object sinks. There's no fire. But the effect is the same. The work stops. The waters back up into the ponds and basements and they rise and rise alarmingly again. And that's as far as I've gotten on this. How do you like it so far?

Next comes the who-is-responsible part. Then the arrival of the replacement pump, the inspection, the installation of the pump performed by remote controlled robots and then, oh maybe we'd best just forget the whole thing.

June 19: A Night of Amazing Parties

By Sharon Feiereisen

So many parties, so little time—not a bad problem to have, right? Especially when all the parties are being held to benefit charitable causes in dire need of our support. While there are countless happenings on any given day here on the East End, on Saturday, June 19 there will be five major fundraisers vying for your attention. We've got the low-down on the hosting organizations, the venues, the celebrity attendee, the scrumptious eats, and more, so you can plan for one of the most fun-filled days of the upcoming summer season.

Christian Grattan

God's Love We Deliver, last year at Whimsy Farm

Pride in the Hamptons: Live Out Loud's 2nd Annual Fundraiser

When: June 19, 2010, 6-8:30 p.m.

Where: 21 North Bay Lane, East Hampton

How: Tickets start at $85 ($100 at door). Go to liveoutloud.info or contact Leo Preziosi at 212-651-4236.

Dedicated to empowering lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender (LGBT) youth, Live Out Loud is a not-for-profit organization that connects LGBT youth with role models and leaders in the LGBT community. The organization, founded nine years ago, will be hosting their summer event at the luxurious waterfront home of Bruce T. Sloane. Guests are in for a variety of treats including hors d'oeuvres catered by East Hampton's highly-regarded Brent Newsom Catering, cocktails, dancing, and a silent auction (just in time for Father's Day!). Included among the auction items is a walk-on role in a film or television project with Grant Wilfley Casting, tickets to a variety of shows including FELA! on Broadway, Come Fly Away, and Equus. The auction will also feature works by artists Bob Bachler, Steven Corsano, Nathan Joseph, James Kennedy, Julie Keyes, and Math-You Namie, along with a black silk faille coat by Ralph Rucci from his Chado Ralph Rucci line worth $10,000.

FOR THE EAST END

Alec, Nicole and Bob at Green Gala

The event's honorary hosts include Charles Busch, Coleman Domingo, Stephen Flaherty, Ari Gold, Julie Halston, Kelly King, Stewart Lane and Bonnie Comley, Terrance McNally and Tom Kirdahy, Daryl Roth, Marc Shaima, and Scott Wittman. With Ferrari Maserati Rolls-Royce Motor Cars of Long Island among the evening's sponsors, you can expect there to be some of the finest luxury cars on display.

Guests can also look forward to insightful words from Brandyn Brunelle, one of nine students who were awarded a $2,500 scholarship at Live Out Loud's 9th Annual Trailblazers Gala, which was hosted by actor Alan Cumming on April 26 at The Chelsea Art Museum in New York City.

For nearly a decade Live Out Loud has brought countless LGBT role models to New York tri-state area high schools and universities, involving spiritual leaders, renowned fashion designers, corporate powerhouses, grassroots activists, and more. The panelists have included actress Cherry Jones, author Eric Marcus, director John Cameron Mitchell,

Human Resting Area: It's Our Turn

By Susan M. Galardi

I was at a beach party over the weekend at Sagg Main. Blue sky above. Kids floating at the cut to the west. Guys reeling in 18-inch bluefish at the edge of the surf. And behind us, a delicately fenced off area with signs, wires and little orange flags to mark the territory of terns and plovers.

Then, somebody showed up with a dog. "Get that dog on a leash!" a man shouted, "That is a protected wildlife area—terns and plovers are nesting!"

The careless dog owner promised to keep an eye on the fluffy haired beast (a poodle). And in fact, the dog had no interest in the birds.

But plovers and terns are a hot button issue out here. Their numbers were almost wiped out a few decades ago, and so came a full-blown effort to save them by creating special, protected Tern and Plover Nesting Areas—cordoning off large swaths of beach; prohibiting driving in some areas; limiting dogs; and the thorn in many Hamptonites' side, postponing July 4 Fireworks until some time in September.

But we must protect the terns and plovers! At all costs! Even human costs!

Yesterday I went to Long Beach in Sag Harbor, and as I quietly walked from the lot toward the water, I was dive bombed by a kamikaze tern. It screamed at me like a banshee, fluttered menacingly above then dived at my head like an arrow from a crossbow.

DO NOT ENTER

"Go away!" I screamed, flailing my arms and probably breaking some ordinance. I scurried away quickly, riddled with guilt, and reeling with visions of Tippi Hedron and the woman who had her eyes pecked out in The Birds.

But unlike either her or Tippi, I deserved this treatment. I had disturbed the terns! How dare I? They must be PROTECTED. They need to be left alone on their swath of beach, surrounded by their fences and prohibiting us from letting our dogs run and our fireworks go off.

I found a place for my chair far away from them. Shortly, some kids wandered over to the fence. "Stay away from there!" yelled the mom, hysterically. "You can't disturb them—they're NESTING!!!"

I suddenly felt extremely jealous of these annoying birds, and I realized that, when I die, I want to come back not as a dog in Manhattan, but as a TERN on a BEACH in the HAMPTONS. I want to be in my own little protected area for three months. Hell with the terns—try bothering ME and you'll end up with a citation.

And that's when I thought of it: the creation of a Protected Human Resting Area. It would be inhabited only by tired adults with too many responsibilities who just want to sit on the beach and read a damn book and NOT be DISTURBED.

Can you see it? We'd have large stretches on the best beaches where we could place our chairs far away from one other. If our children even TRIED to approach us, guards on the beach would yell, "You can't go in there! Leave them alone! They're RESTING!"

In fact, if anyone came near, we would all get up, run outside of the protected area, screeching at the intruders, waving our arms and swinging to slap them, but just missing.

If a dog ran in and started ogling our food cooler, a giant net would scoop it up and fling it into the cove. It would be illegal to disturb us IN ANY WAY until after Labor Day. There could be no fireworks nor noise of any kind anywhere near our area. Low flying helicop-

Howard Schultz, the President and Chief Executive Officer of Starbucks, bought a house in the Hamptons about 10 years ago. There was no Starbucks in Southampton at the time. I think when it opened, he must have thought—oh, that's not quite right—but then might have thought, well, what do I know, that's why I hired these people to find these locations.

Also at that time, Starbucks was flying high. In 2000, Schultz turned over the reins of the company to a new CEO and it was he who had made this decision, amongst many others, about where new locations should open.

In 2008, when it became apparent that many of this new CEO's decisions were bad ones, Schultz roared back to life to save his company. He asked the CEO to resign and took over the reins himself. He dealt with marketing and training, and he ordered the closing of about 200 of the least profitable Starbuck units. One of which—surprise—was Southampton.

Well, he still has a great location in Bridgehampton and, for reasons of good foot traffic, another great location in East Hampton. Southampton thus closed.

I think it fair to say that running a restaurant chain is largely about image and living up to that image. Several other big chains during that period tried to change their images a bit to compete with the sagging fortunes. of Starbucks. One of them was McDonald's, which tried to compete head on, but soon fell into a sort of hybrid with their cappuccino being just one more offering of cheap things on the menu.

A more successful competitor was Dunkin' Donuts. Dunkin' Donuts had been for many years a sort of blue collar worker's stop for fresh coffee and donuts. A new CEO there thought they could move slightly into Starbucks' upscale market by offering an expensive, but Americanized, version of a cappuccino. He also ordered the chain to provide not just a good cup of coffee, but a great one. The plan worked.

And so who passes eastbound along County Road 39 today? Everybody and anybody who is on his way out here, that's who. In the morning, there's a huge trade parade of swimming pool maintenance people, landscapers, carpenters, tennis court builders and climate control people who drive out here in pickup trucks beginning at 6 a.m. every morning and just LOVE to stop and have a coffee and donut to help wake themselves up. And oh look, a Dunkin'. This trade parade lasts until about 9, then ends once everybody is at work. After that, who comes out here, all day, are delivery people to restock the retailers and mixed in with them thousands of well-to-do people in BMWs and Porsches and Cadillacs heading out to their summer vacation homes. This goes on all day every day.

Things ease up going eastbound around 5 p.m., with the single exception of Friday when the people from the city come out late into the evening. People aren't much interested in a coffee and donut after about 5 p.m., however. It's too near dinner. Or it's too late after dinner.

Later in the day, although there is a great jam of traffic going westbound, Dunkin' Donuts has less appeal for the same reason. So that's that.

I wish Dunkin' Donuts luck. They have already taken down the green Starbucks awning and repainted the place inside and out a variety of shades of coffee-color brown. Makes sense.

But we STILL need a Starbucks in Southampton. Schultz, when you have a minute, perhaps you can bring us one? It would work very well downtown.

Until then, we'll have to make do with what just might be the best cappuccino ever anywhere, including Starbucks, at the back counter of Sant Ambroeus, the little uncompromising Italian restaurant on Main Street in that town that appears to be a café picked up by helicopter on the Piazza di SPagna in Rome and, Italian newspapers and all, just dropped right into the middle of here.

The cappuccino will be the same price as in Starbucks, but it will be smaller, and it will be served to you in a crockery cup and saucer by a waiter in a white apron and you will drink it there, you will not take it out. You'll lean on the glass bar as you drink it not far from the glass case where they scoop out the gelato. And if you know what's good for you, you will speak only Italian. Buon Giorno.

Like I said, we still need a Starbucks in Southampton.

Givin' You the BUSINESS

Summer Business Heats Up

By T.J. Clemente

Last summer is a very dark memory to many business owners on the East End, a season when too many of them reported that sales were down around at least 30% from the previous year (2008)—which wasn't exactly a banner year either. But all signs so far are pointing upward to a better season for the summer of 2010.

Henry Hildreth IV said last year was "painful," perhaps the worst on his watch of the Southampton business that was founded by his family around 1842. He expressed his gratitude to the premium shoppers who came by on Memorial Day weekend and purchased products like high end lawn furniture, "like they always do every year." However, he added that he was concerned about the purchasing power of the middle class. He explained that although there is recovery in this area it's still not up to pre-economic meltdown performance. Hildreth said he felt confident that moving forward, the middle class shopper will come back. He confirmed sales were up, and that he plans on finetuning his sales force to be up to Hildreth's high standards.

In East Hampton, a friend who runs a top name designer shop was not as positive as Hildreth. Her leading sales girl said, "Traffic was very busy, but no one was buying." She was disappointed.

I went to the Blue Parrot on Saturday night and was surprised that there was no line to get in, and there were seats at the bar. The same was true for Cittanuova, where I went in to greet Jim Jenson (J.J.) nearing a 30 year-anniversary bartending at the same location. I promptly landed two seats at the bar for an espresso. Earlier that evening I was in Montauk doing a restaurant review of the elegant, fine dining at The Harvest. Usually, without reservations, a seat at The Harvest is tough to get on a Saturday night—no less Memorial Day Saturday night. But it was not over-flowingly busy at 8:30 p.m.

That Saturday night, I drove from Patchogue to Montauk and back on Route 27, and never was caught in traffic either way. That may be due in part to the expansion of lanes of County Route 39/NY-27 in Southampton, but with such great weather I was astonished at how swiftly I was able to get to Montauk, then back to East Hampton, where at 10:30 there was parking both in the lots and on the street. Waldbaum's, no longer open 24 hours during the season, was also busy but not crazy, the young checkout girl said, "It really doesn't get crazy until the first weekend in July, and super crazy the first weekend in August."

Interesting enough, I had to stop at the 7-Eleven in Sag Harbor and couldn't get a parking space in their huge lot. I ended up leaving when I saw the line inside was perhaps 30 people long, and moving slowly as the purchasers seemed to be in animated discussions about the prices. Hildreth shared his wisdom on this past Memorial Day when he explained, "This weekend we had great weather, really great beach weather, and that is not conducive to afternoon shopping." So when asked, what the best weather is for shop owners, he said, "Fog, lots of fog."

I joked how I bet the concession stands at Cooper Beach in Southampton (being operated this season by the former owner of John Duck's) and at East Hampton's Main Beach must have been very busy with the great beach weather. I also noticed empty slips at all the Three-Mile Harbor Marinas (true, it is early). One owner said, "I used to have a waiting list, this season I have openings."

Lastly, on Sunday I drove the scenic North Fork and took in its unique elegance. Starting off in Riverhead, the Tanger Outlets parking lot was overflowing. There was no need to ask how business was there.

But there's nothing like shopping in the quaint, elegant, walkable downtowns of Southampton Village and East Hampton. Sag Harbor has a charm that is timeless, with a mixture of the traditional and quaint, and some chic new shops. Revisit these locations and find some values, sales and treats. While we may be off to a slower start, the dark days of the summer 2009 are in the rear view mirror.

Plum Island Is for Sale. No It Isn't. Yes It Is.

By T.J. Clemente

Two years ago, when then President George W. Bush and his administration were leaving no stones unturned on the "War on Terror," his homeland security department proposed closing the Plum Island Federal Animal Disease center. The idea was to build a new state of the art facility somewhere else. For years it was speculated that in addition to animal disease research, other clandestine CIA activities transpired on Plum Island's 843 acres, with just a few grim looking buildings—perhaps germ warfare research. The Nelson DeMille novel titled Plum Island didn't help deter those notions.

However, at the time, Southold Town Supervisor Scott Russell was set on saving the facility, a level 3 research lab. If it were level 4, then it might become the target of terrorist and anyone else who might like to get their hands on toxins fatal to humans, such as the Ebola virus and Anthrax. Homeland Security thought about a conversion to a level 4 that would entail spending an estimated $451 million.

Even before the economic downturn, an infusion of that kind of money was seen as good business for the North Fork. Supervisor Russell explained why he wanted the expansion of the facilities, basically saying that it provided around 200 jobs for the 60 years it had been in existence.

The decision made back in 2009, perhaps political at the time, came down: Plum Island would be closed and a level 4 facility would be built outside of New York—in a Republican district. Then the topic of conversation moved to: What would become of Plum Island?

In recent conversations, Supervisor Russell explained that although General Services Administration (GSA) may want to sell the Island, there are other factors in play. First of all, the Obama Administration never funded the new facility to be built, thus delaying the closing date of Plum Island to 2018 or beyond. Russell explained that GSA was doing its job to prepare a sale, but whether or not they have the actual legitimate jurisdiction to be the sole administrator of the facility is up in the air. Homeland Security, and other government agencies, perhaps the CIA, all have a hand in the pie, so to speak.

So, as speculation runs rampant about whether the Island is to become everything from a glorified old folks home, to a gambling Mecca, to a super sailboat marina, to a prison, the truth is that, most likely, it will remain the same for the next eight years. However, government being what it is, wheels are spinning on various processes such as investigating the possibility of selling the Island, with all the reports being filed, hearings being held and political fodder amassing. With Tim Bishop running for his life to be re-elected, no doubt he will stand firm and tall, advocating the status quo for his district to preserve the federal revenues flowing in.

For those who sail Gardiner's Bay and Long Island Sound, Plum Island is also home of the Plum Gut—a passage way most boats take when going from New York City, Westchester County, and southern Connecticut to Montauk, Block Island and the Atlantic. Within the narrow passage way of the Plum Gut is the Plum Island Lighthouse. The land for the Lighthouse was purchased in 1827. Believe it or not, Benedict Arnold patrolled the Plum Gut for the British during the American Revolution after he turned traitor, following the West Point fiasco. A large segment of the British Fleet anchored off Plum Island after abandoning Boston during the Revolution because of the large supply of beef (Deep Hollow Ranch) and sheep, along with farm goods so readily available for the taking on the East End. In fact one

Angry Book People Bestow Award - Hee Haw

By Dan Rattiner

A group of angry book reviewers, book publishers and prominent authors assembled on the lawn of Dan's Papers in Bridgehampton on Saturday morning to protest the pathetically low level to which book reviews have sunk and to award a bronze plaque known as the Donkey Award (Equus Asinus) to the reviewer selected as the person writing the worst review in 2009-2010.

"The award considered not only the level of writing of the review, but also the choice of the book reviewed," said Donkey Award founder Martin Shepard. "The Times has strayed from reviewing excellent books—philosophy, literature or translations by significant foreign authors. They review junk pop literature instead, and then, of course, the reviewer trashes it. What a waste of paper."

This was the First Annual Donkey Award. The winner of it this year was reviewer Janet Maslin's double review of Caught by Harlan Coben and Never Look Away by Linwood Barclay, which Maslin wrote for The New York Times.

Runners up for the Donkey Award were reviewer Nellie McKay for an extraordinarily bad review of John Lennon by Philip Norman, Stanley Fish for Going Rogue by Sarah Palin, Walter Kirn for his review of Solar by Ian McEwan and Janet Maslin's (again) review of the book Star—How Warren Beatty Seduced America by Peter Beskind which also appeared in the Times.

The inscription on the bronze plaque reads The Donkey Award—for the Best Abuse of Space for the Least Deserving Book. No donkey was in attendance, but one of the six judges, National Public Radio book reviewer Joan Baum, wore Donkey Ears to the ceremony.

The jurists for the award, besides Joan Baum were Bill Henderson, editor, author and publisher of the Pushcart Press, Daniel Klein, novelist and playwright, Marc Schuster, novelist and critic for the Small Press Review, the aforementioned Martin Shepard, author and co-publisher of the Permanent Press and Dan Rattiner, author and founder of Dan's Papers and owner of the property in the commercial district of Bridgehampton at which the awards took place.

Donkey Award President Martin Shephard said that the committee had scoured through a thousand reviews and more before making ters would be zapped out of the sky by lasers. People playing kadima would be imprisoned. And, most important, terns and plovers wouldn't be allowed within 1,000 feet of airspace, lest they go the way of the helicopters.

The plover/tern initiative, with its goal to restore breeding pairs, has been very successful. In fact, they're just a couple dozen short of the 500 breeding-pair-goal for plovers.

I say it's time to move 'em out. They're doing just fine, while many of us are a mess, stressed out by not having a MINUTE to ourselves; our nerves shot from pointy birds trying to kill us for the last 20 years; our resolve broken by the fear of inadvertently committing some crime against the terns. Basta! I say to "Plover Nesting areas." Up with "Humans Resting Areas." It's our turn.

of the earliest sea battles of the Revolution was fought right there between Plum Island and Orient Point.

Sailing around Plum Island and looking at the famous water tower and facilities has always been a topic of conversation for local sailors and power boaters as well as fisherman. I was told to stay away; I always wondered what really was happening on that island—a place where only security-cleared federal workers were allowed to commute via a special ferry. How many other federal facilities doing research are so well protected?

Scott Russell is keeping a watchful eye on all possibilities, vowing to protect the interest of Southold Town's well being—at least, its financial wellbeing.

Midsummer Night Drinks: God's Love We Deliver's 10th Annual Fundraiser

When: June 19, 2010, 6-9 p.m.

Where: The Barnyard, home of Chad A. Leat, Bridgehampton

How: Tickets: Co-Host (includes 4 tickets, invitation listing, and recognition at the event): $5000, Friends Committee (includes 2 tickets, invitation listing, and recognition at the event): $2500, Individual Tickets—$1,000, $500, and $300. Contact Susan Oher at 212-294-8162 or events@glwd.org.

"Joan, you're hired!" If those words sound familiar you've likely heard of God's Love We Deliver, as they were the deserving recipients of over $500,000 thanks to Joan Rivers, a Donald Trump "Celebrity Apprentice" winner. The check has helped the organization meet the overwhelming demand for their services and now the Hampton community can do their part as well.

Every year God's Love We Deliver hosts their Midsummer Night Drinks annual fundraiser in a stunning Hampton residence (Rory and Elie Tahari hosted a past event in their home). The spirited party is held to help facilitate the non-profit's mission to "improve the health and well-being of men, women and children living with HIV/AIDS, cancer and other life-altering illnesses by alleviating hunger and malnutrition." God's Love We Deliver cooks and delivers over 3,400 meals every weekday to people living with HIV/AIDS, cancer, Parkinson's and Alzheimer's diseases, and many other serious illnesses.

Past attendees of this glamorous East End event have included Tory Burch, Simon Doonan, Kyle MacLachlan, and Olivia Chantecaille, so expect this year's affair to be star-studded and complete with cocktails, hors d'oeuvres, and a live auction.

SoFo's Hawaiian Luau: South Fork Natural History Museum and Nature Center's 5th Annual Dinner Dance

When: June 19, 2010, 6:30-11 p.m.

Where: South Fork Natural History Museum, 377 Bridgehampton/Sag Harbor Turnpike, Bridgehampton

How: Cocktail ticket, $75 (6:30-8 p.m.); Cocktail, dinner, and dancing ticket $200 (6:30-11 p.m.); Patron table, $2,500 (8 tickets); Benefactor table, $5,000 (10 tickets); Underwriter table, $10,000 (10 tickets). Contact Carol Crasson at 631-537-9735 or email sofo@hamptons.com to purchase tickets.

Come decked-out in your finest Hawaiian chic for this festive event and you'll be in for some fabulous island fun. In addition to a performance by The Fugitives, this year's South Fork Natural History Museum and Nature Center's Hawaiian-themed dinner and dance will boast a decadently bountiful Hawaiian feast prepared by Southampton's farm-to-table favorite, Thyme & Again. All of the evening's proceeds will go to benefit the museum's educational programming.

As Hamptonites we're all very proud of the beautiful landscape we're so privileged to be surrounded by, making the museum's mission to "provide children and adults with an appreciation and understanding of the unique natural world of the South Fork of Long Island" all the more poignant.

During the evening it will award its second annual $1,000 South Fork Natural History Museum—SoFo Scholarship to Charlotte LaGuardia, a Southampton High School graduating senior. LaGuardia was selected for her impressive academic track record and, according to Jim Ash, the museum's Executive Director, "with the idea in mind that she will, as the result of undergraduate or graduate work, have an impact on the understanding and well-being of the natural environment."

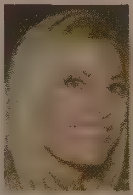
Whispers

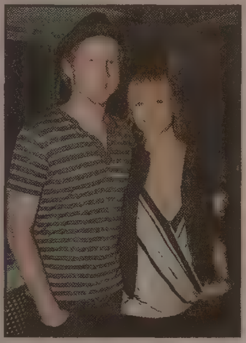


With Gina Glickman

Sixteen-year-old Canadian singer Justin Bieber, who went from being an unknown artist on You Tube to a mega famous teen rock idol with an album My World 2.0 and several hit singles "Baby," "Eenie Meenie," with Sean Kingston, and his current single, "Somebody to Love," is officially a pencil pusher!

Yeah, I said it. What? He is part of the PoP global movement that hit the Hamptons this past Saturday.

The Boat House, in East Hampton played host to Bieber's fav organization, PENCILS of PROMISE, a charity which works to build schools and increase educational opportunities in the developing world.



Gina Glickman

Linney, Manning

Actress Taryn Manning who stars in the upcoming CBS series, "Hawaii Five-O" was the official celebrity DJ and entertained PoP party goers by mixing it up on the turn tables alongside her boyfriend, Michael Linney. Adam Braun is the founder of PoP and was inspired by a trip to India, where he met a young boy who was begging on the streets. Braun asked him, "What do you want most in the world?" The boy replied, "A pencil." Braun reached into his backpack and handed him a pencil and then watched as a wave of possibility washed over him.

Braun says, "I saw then the profound power and promise brought through something as small as a giving a pencil to just one child." Over the next five years. Braun backpacked through more than 50 countries and handed out thousands of pens and pencils across six continents. According to Braun, the pencils are small pieces of potential that led to powerful conversations throughout numerous cultures and languages—conversations about the state of education and the local need to empower. Thanks to a $25 bank deposit by Braun and a simple desire to build just one school in the developing world. In less than two years, PoP has grown into an international movement of over 40,000 committed supporters. Even better, the first three schools were entirely funded by donations of less than $50 by students and young professionals from across the globe. That brings us back to Bieber who is such a dedicated pencil pusher that he wants to donate one dollar per ticket, from the sales of his upcoming National Concert Tour which kicks off June 23.

Hanging the Banks

Most of these people now view the money they aren't paying to the banks as extra money. It helps them advertise their businesses. It helps them go on vacations. It helps them fix up their houses, even though they know that sooner or later they will be out of them.

The thing is, it is now much later than sooner. The average amount of time that passes from when a bank forecloses and the homeowner is forced out is now measured in years. In Florida, the average is 415 days. In New York, the average is 561 days. The obvious reason for this is the great backlog of foreclosed homes that have to be dealt with. But there's another reason too. Lawyers have now begun to do a brisk business in representing people who make the decision to simply stop paying their mortgages.

"I just do as much as needs to be done to force the bank to prove its case," said Mark Stopa, who is one of these lawyers. "For example, I'll ask them to prove that they are the oneswho owns the mortgage. I did that in one case eight months ago and it stopped the process cold. We still haven't heard anything from them."

Stopa asks his clients to pay him a fee of about $1,500, spread out over a year or two. He can get them to remain in their homes sometimes for that amount of time and more.

HELLO, TEA PAERTY!

I read this story on the front page of The New York Times, with a jump to the Business Section where, I am sure, everyone is thinking—"How can we put a stop to this?"

"I've just stopped being scared of bankers calling me and threatening to foreclose on me," a woman said, "Let them be scared of ME."

THE GREEN AWARD

Last week we presented the Dan's Papers Green Award to the company that makes Icelandic Glacial bottled water. On the plastic bottle, Icelandic Glacial declares itself to be absolutely pure and recyclable.

The Green Award goes out to the dumbest claims that the ad people can dream up. In this case, Icelandic Glacial has nothing to say about the cost of bringing the water to you. You've already got water. But this water is brought in container ships powered by diesel engines that belch the worst pollutants imaginable into the sky just so their cargo can be steamed across the ocean, just so they can be enjoyed by little old you.

This week's Green Award goes to Continental Airlines for declaring that they have received the award for being the most environmentally friendly airline in the world. So next time you see a Continental Jet streaking through the air amongst the 20,000 other aircraft that are in the skies over America at any one time, know that Continental is spewing a record amount less into the stratosphere than all the others. There you are.

Angry

their choices. The final decision was by popular vote among the jurists. Janet Maslin won it fair and square.

Shepard read this quote from the winning review.

"When a main character searching for a lost loved one becomes the main suspect in that person's disappearance, the story is figuratively stuck on Monopoly's low end Baltic Avenue."—Janet Maslin.

And he also read an excerpt from one of the reviews that was a runner-up.

"Nobody can get to the heart of our Johnny, or ears. Gary Oldman lied but nobody licked him, being a journalist. Phyllis Diller's The Wife is very impressive and lull that, but who's got the money these days? (All the wrong pimple, that's who—backoff scullards, go mount your monkey.) Nonetheless to fins this book is like Jo dine all over gin."—Nellie McKay.

He also said there was an attempt made to get an actual live donkey to the award ceremony, but the person with the donkey said in the morning it would cost $150, but then later in the day called back to say make that $500. As the former had been accepted it seemed an unfair thing to jack up the price so much in just a few hours, so the committee said never mind.

The presence of the donkey at the awards was sort of hinted at in the press releases sent out prior to the event in the hopes that some reporters might show up to pet a donkey. But that idea did not seem to help anything. All in attendance agreed on the fact that the quality of reviews, particularly under the latest regime of book editorship at The New York Times, had sunk to new low levels.

Any suggestions for a reasonably priced donkey for next year's award would be greatly appreciated.

TWENTYSOMETHING... By DAVID LION RATTINER

Parking Tickets

The young teenage parking ticket givers are on the hunt now, and they terrify me.

We used to call the traffic cops in the Hamptons brownies because they used to wear brown uniforms, but today a young boy or girl is in a reflective yellow vest, armed with a stick that has chalk on it and ticket giving power. They are everywhere in East Hampton.

The police presence in the Hamptons is always strong in the summertime because of the increased population and the amount of people who come out here, party hard and then get behind the wheel. So we all know that the police are necessary, but at the same time, even if you haven't done anything wrong and are all up to date on everything with your car, it's still nerve-racking.

Being a local teenager in East Hampton was a very happy time when it came to parking because half of the traffic cops were guys that you went to school with and people that you knew. But today, I park my car with the same caution that I park my car in New York City. I study the sign, I check my watch, I look around for anything suspicious, and then I move on.

So far, I've avoided parking tickets, mainly due to the fear of getting one, but others haven't been so lucky. If you're in the mood to people watch in the Hamptons, sit on a bench and watch people react to their parking tickets.

As a former beach attendant at Main Beach in East Hampton, I know how crazy people can get about parking. And since there are very few things in East Hampton that I can afford to buy or do, other than get a cup of coffee and people watch, I did this last Saturday.

While sitting on a bench on Newtown Lane, I observed. There he was, a young man with sunglasses, a stick, a badge and a pen. Two of his colleagues were manning a crosswalk, stopping traffic to let people cross. This is part of the pleasure of walking in the Hamptons, being able to cross the street instantly. With officials stopping traffic for you, it makes you feel like the Governor. Across the street, a ticket was being written, and in a matter of minutes the show began.

The car was a Mercedes and the woman was wearing a hat and armed with shopping bags. She got to her car, saw the ticket, picked it up off of the windshield and looked around the world.

How could this happen to me? She thought. Do these people have any idea WHO I AM? Somebody must get an earful for this. And so she loaded up her car with her bags, and paced to the left, in search of the young man with the badge and sunglasses. She demanded an explanation. And off she went down the block to the corner of Ellie Tahari, but no traffic cop was there, and so she headed back up the street, ticket in hand for all to see. What kind of society are we living in? She thought. The New York Post will want to hear about this injustice.

And she walked and found the young future police officer and showed him the ticket.

I took a sip of my coffee. This was better than going to the movies. She pointed at the ticket and then the young man pointed at her car. He was cool as a cucumber. This was not his first rodeo, however you could tell that this wasn't the woman's first rodeo either. There is no doubt in my mind that this lady has received numerous free airline tickets thanks to a little temper tantrum now and again at the airport. It works for her. She knows what's she's doing.

But the young boy held strong. He shook his head. I'm sorry, he explained, you can call the clerk's office and fight the ticket if you'd like. I can't reverse this. Have a nice day.

But……

But……

But nothing. And then the woman began to talk to others walking by her. It was time for her to start a revolution. It was time for her to gather supporters, witnesses, testimony, protestors. She grabbed somebody in the street who had a stroller and the concerned man politely told her sorry, and moved on. The young traffic officer was moving on as well. The woman stood there. As far as she was concerned, the world was coming to an end. Things like this just shouldn't happen. It's wrong. It's unjust. It's not fair.

And she went back to her Mercedes and pulled away, no doubt leaving a message with her lawyer. She'll show these people who's boss.

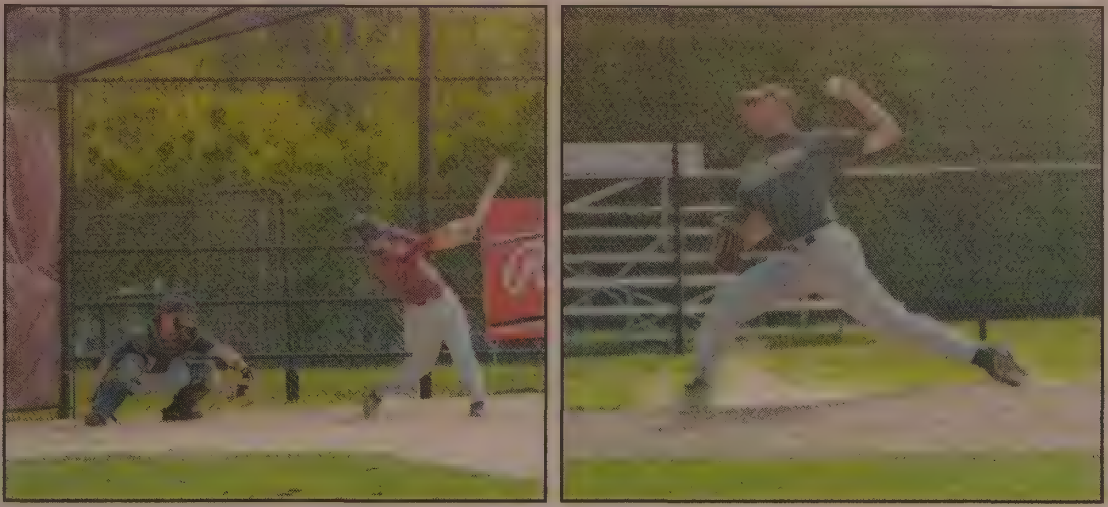
Whalers Win—and So Do the Fans

By Matt Ianno



The Boys of Summer, in practice photos from season one.

It is simultaneously nostalgic and invigorating: the sound of a baseball making contact with a bat. For many of us, it propels a collection of childhood memories to the forefront of our consciousness and commands our immediate attention to a baseball diamond.

It's 5 p.m. on the first Friday in June—opening day for Hamptons Collegiate Baseball (HCB) at Stony Brook's Southampton campus. The visiting Sag Harbor Whalers are taking on the Southampton Breakers in the second season of HCB action; the largest division in the Atlantic Collegiate Baseball League.

The field at Stony Brook Southampton is neatly tucked away off Montauk Highway; close enough to hear the cars passing by on the busy road but far enough to be in its own element. On this day, a convivial breeze is massaging the trees surrounding the field and providing enough refreshment to keep the spectators comfortable in the 80-degree weather. Baseball weather. College players from across the country are chewing sunflower seeds and adjusting uniforms in preparation for the start of a 40-game schedule; one that keeps many players away from home for the summer.

Southampton third baseman Blake Amaral, who hails from Hilo, Hawaii, traveled farther than any other player to compete in this league. "I came to this league to get away from home and get exposure," Amaral told me. This is Amaral's first time spending a summer away from his family, which supports him and is excited about his opportunity. Amaral hit .404 for Hawaii Pacific this past college season and was named to the First team All-Pac West. He heard about the league after his college coach made some calls for him and got him involved with HCB. Amaral's host family will provide him with a room and meals for the length of his summer schedule, which has him playing six games per week.

Rusty Leaver, the President of HCB, started the league last year in hopes of How: Individual tickets start at $450. Tables of 10 start at $7,500. Contact Judy Christrup at 631-537-1400, ext. 215 or eastendgala.org to purchase tickets.

What better place to celebrate all things green than at the East End's famed sustainable vineyard, Wölffer Estate? This event will be held in party tents under the direction of Master of Ceremonies Felicia Taylor. Chefs James Carpenter of The Living Room, Tom Schaudel and Michael Ross of CoolFish, a Mano & Gabrielle's, Brian Fishman of Sweet Karma Desserts, and Todd Jacobs of Atlantica will all be showing off their skills at this festive event. Proceeds will be going to the Group for the East End, an organization that has been protecting and restoring the environment of eastern Long Island through education, citizen action, and professional advocacy since 1972.

Revelers at Live Out Loud

Guests will be in for a culinary treat at this benefit, which will focus on local produce, products, and production via a cocktail hour and a three-course seated, farm-to-table dinner sourced from local farms and prepared by the aforementioned, award-winning local chefs. Course highlights include Riverhead Bison Brochettes with Wölffer Merlot Glaze, Local Spring Pea Bruschetta with Truffle Oil and Fried Sage, North Fork Clam Fritters with Smoked Tomato Remoulade, and Goat Cheese Cheesecake with Wild Local Strawberries. Dinner will be accompanied by tunes from the Henry Haid and the Only In America Band and a green-centric auction including Eco Adventures in New Mexico and Kenya will complete the night.

More than 400 celebrities and high net worth influencers from the worlds of fashion, finance, food and wine, and philanthropy—including Generation Green Co-Chairs Amanda Hearst, Kick Kennedy, Nicole Miller, and Summer Rayne Oakes—are already confirmed to attend.

Live at Club Starlight: Ross School's Annual Benefit

When: June 19, 2010, 6:30 p.m.

Where: Great Hall in the Center for Well-Being, 18 Goodfriend Drive, East Hampton

How: Benefactor Table of 12 $50,000; Platinum Table of 10 $25,000; Gold Table of 10 $10,000; Individual Tickets $450; Ross Family Individual Tickets $375. Contact Jennifer Rockford at to purchase tickets.

This year the Ross School's annual benefit will honor acting legend Julie Andrews and feature an all-star Motown Review with performances by The Miracles, Martha Reeves and The Vandellas, and Jr Walker's All Star Band. The fun will kick-off with cocktails and continue with dinner, dancing, a raffle, and live and silent auctions. Among the live auction items will be a one-of-a-kind Harry Winston Lady's Avenue Quartz Watch that boasts a black satin strap, mother of pearl dial, and 2.38 carats of diamonds on bezel and lugs. This exquisite piece is valued at nearly $30,000 and comes with an 18K yellow gold case. Other items are a table for 8 at Rao's in Manhattan, a New York Knicks Experience package, and tickets and backstage access to a slew of concerts and shows including Saturday Night Live, Jimmy Buffet, The Martha Stewart Show, and the Jonas Brothers with Demi Lovato.

The Ross School is known for throwing some of the most prestigious events in the Hamptons and celebrity attendees have included everyone from Martha Stewart, Christie Brinkley, and Isabella Rossellini, to Elie Tahari, Andre Agassi, Alec Baldwin and a slew of Real Housewives.

Proceeds from the evening will go to benefit the Ross School, an accredited independent school for pre-nursery through grade 12 with campuses in East Hampton and Bridgehampton. Ross provides a global curriculum in science, arts, humanities and wellness, as well as competitive athletics, college placement and opportunities for travel.

Cleaning Up the Spill

By Allyson Zacharoff

Anger. Frustration. Rage. These words describe the reigning emotions many Americans are feeling towards British Petroleum at the moment, as every day new reports emerge about just how toxic the oil in the Gulf is, and just how little impact the company's cleanup efforts have had. One particularly proactive Sag Harbor citizen, April Gornik, from the group Save Sag Harbor, decided to initiate a citizen-led effort to do something about it. As strange as it sounds, Gornik's effort is focused on the collection of human hair.

"I'd heard about it on NPR (National Public Radio)," Gornik said. Apparently, the environmentally-focused charity A Matter of Trust, an environmental not-for-profit group, made a call for donations of different natural fibers, including wool, animal fur and human hair. This material would then be placed into nylon stockings to create tight, sausage-like packages of fibers. "Hair absorbs oil so well," Gornik explained.

But unfortunately it absorbs ocean water too, and BP announced last month that they would not utilize the hair booms. Matter of Trust has committed to keeping the booms in case they are needed in the future.

Trying to help in another way, the Miller Environmental Group, based in Calverton, New York, has sent down around 100 of its Long Island employees to clean up the oil since April. "They're doing a variety of different things," Mark Miller said. Some are working near different shorelines in southern states with shallow water remedies, while others "are offshore operating equipment on an oil recovery ship," quite close to the actual spill. But in terms of the booms, which Miller first used in the 1970s to cleanup a spill in Port Jefferson, "the technology has absolutely evolved" since then. Instead of the booms, Miller's company uses smart sorbent technology through what he calls "pom poms." These items specifically draw oil to them while repelling water, and are placed in lines near marshlands. They stay there for one or two tidal cycles and collect any incoming oil, and each one "can hold up to seven gallons of oil." After they are full, they are replaced with new ones. "The recovery operation has been incredibly successful," Miller went on to say, contrary to what larger media outlets might be sharing. Despite these new technologies, however, many environmental groups (including Matter of Trust) still support the use of natural hair booms.

In order to get the word out to the Sag Harbor community about her grassroots effort to collect hair, Gornik went to the group Save Sag Harbor, in which she is very involved. At first, the boxes were shipped from the post office, but Gornik considered contacting UPS instead because she thought that they might be offering free pickup for these hair shipments.

As of June 3 Gornik said that she had already shipped down 40 pounds of hair, and that in terms of the drive, "we've been doing fine." But she is convinced that other citizens will need to become more involved, especially in the affected southern states, because of BP's failure to adequately deal with the problem. As long as footage of animals black and shiny from oil is shown on television, the American public will be motivated to help in any way that they can.

Southampton Hospital did something no hospital in New York City was able to do. Twice.

We received the highest rating for patient safety. Again!

HealthGrades, the nation's leading independent auditor of hospitals, just recognized us for being in the top 5% of hospitals nationally for patient safety. Only 238 hospitals in the country received this award for 2010, and not one of them was in New York City. At Southampton Hospital we strive to provide the highest quality of care and we commend every member of our staff for their tireless work. This is great news for all of us who work at Southampton Hospital, and more important – it's great news for everyone in the community.

Whalers Win

creating a Cape Code-style league for major league hopefuls to perform and get better. The league relies on these generous host families in order to keep running, as a majority of the 120 players in the HCB travel from other states to compete. The league also utilizes a number of local baseball diamonds to field the five participating teams. Recently, Stony Brook University announced that it would be closing a majority of its Southampton campus due to a budget crisis, something Leaver assured me would not affect the Breakers' use of the field: "This field will remain open regardless of what happens with the school…we built this field and we maintain it."

The setting is simple when game time arrives: one field, two dugouts, two miniature sets of metal bleachers, and 50 players and coaches that share a love for a sport. There are no video cameras, concession stands, mascots, or digital scoreboards—none of the embellishments that turns the sport into a business. But there is no doubt that every player on the field aspires to the big leagues. All of these elements combined make me feel that I'm witnessing the primordial stage of the American dream.

Southampton got out to an early 1-0 lead on Prateek Thaman's RBI groundout. Sag Harbor struck back with three runs in the 5th to take a 3-1 lead. Each team adds a run in the 6th to make the score 4-2, which would prove to be the final score.

Whalers' pitcher Tom Cardona came in and pitched two innings of relief and eventually got the win. Kyle Prohovich picked up the save for the Whalers after pitching two innings of hitless ball to close out the contest.

After the final out was recorded, a number of Southampton players went out to rake and clean up the field. The crowd gathered up and left just as the sun was ready to fully set.

I stuck around, half expecting Frank Sinatra to sing, "New York, New York" as my years of attending Yankee games has trained me to anticipate, but Sinatra did not show up. The soundtrack was just the hum of the cars traveling along Montauk Highway combined with the post game chatter of the young athletes. I looked around, didn't see a team bus or a lot full of cars ready to carry the players to the homes of their host families. I asked Amaral how he gets to and from games, "I carpool" he said.

If you head out to any of this weekend's games, you'll be able to catch legendary major league pitcher and three-time World Series participant Tommy John. He will be in attendance at four games to meet and greet players and fans: North Fork at Westhampton, Hite Field, Friday 5 p.m.; Westhampton at Sag Harbor, Mashashimuet Park, Saturday 5 p.m.; Riverhead at North Fork, Cochran Park, Saturday 7 p.m.; North Fork at Southampton, Stony Brook Southampton, Sunday 7 p.m. Visit Hamptonsbaseball.com for exact locations.

TuckaNO: Residents Oppose Plan

By T.J. Clemente

It won't be smooth sailing for the proposed "Tuckahoe Main Street Shopping Complex" (off Magee Street and County Road 39 South), as the whole situation has spun into a big time mess. At the June 1 Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) meeting held in the Tuckahoe Hamlet of Southampton Town, CAC Co-Chairwoman Bonnie Goebert let it be known to the Southampton Board that approval of this project would mean a severe loss in support and votes come next election time. With both Southampton Board Members Bridget Fleming and Jim Malone in the audience, along with Village of Southampton Mayor Mark Epley, speaker after speaker took to the lecturn to describe the dissatisfaction of the community with the proposed multi-use PPD (Public Planning District) that would rezone 12.419 acres.

Mary Jane Asato, spokesperson for the developers that includes the interests of mega-supermarket chain King Kullen (whose dark blue pin-striped suited representatives watched the proceedings) presented a storyline of a much needed and well planned development that would address community needs in a most tasteful way. Asato used huge posters mounted on a stage behind her to show the before and after. Bravely she took questions from a crowd that was not sympathetic to her presentation.

Then, Goebert opened the mike to the audience. Let me say this, there was no screaming, yelling nor booing. Rather, local residents showed their displeasure with their wit, heart and soul. Bob Shepps of the Southampton Chamber of Commerce called the proposal, "Beyond the normal scope of zoning." Admitting that he's usually the guy who supports such proposals, Shepps said that he felt differently about this one, which will bring the area "unwanted competition."

TJ Clemente

CAC Chair Goebert

Ken Moffa, a former chairman of CAC, brought up safety issues. Milt Johnson spoke of the project as having "a lack of vision" that would drag property values down. John Bennett, a local Southampton attorney living all of his 53 years in the town, called the proposal, "Downtown Buster" and "Downtown Killer." Using his wit and wry sense of humor to make his points, Bennett said the proposal looked like something in "Nevada or Disney World…perhaps Texas… but not Southampton."

Another gentleman took offense at the huge poster photos, saying they represented false choices, with one before poster making the area look like an inner city eyesore and the other like fantasy land. He called that insulting to those who live in Tuckahoe now.

One citizen calmly explained that if the project was completed as planned the front door of his home would face a number of docks where tractor trailers were unloaded all day long. He spoke of taking his daughters to school while the trailers were backing in and out, stopping traffic in front of his home. Another woman spoke of having counted 31 vacant commercial locations in nearby Southampton Village, with another 17 vacant locations on County Road 39, near the site. She said that going forward with this proposal would in effect create a "downtown ghost town."

Jim Corwin spoke of why he was not in favor of the project, saying to the crowd, "Shop Southampton Village." Only Southampton Mayor Mark Epley stood and said, "I know these men (the developers), they are good men." He then challenged the community to make a counter proposal—not just stand and simply say no to anything. Bravely, newly elected Southampton Town Board Member Bridget Fleming spoke abut the need for dialogue on all town issues so that town leaders can hear all the voices to make tough choices moving forward. She explained that the board originally voted 4-1 (only Chris Nuzzi voted against it) for the project to move to the next level of discussion because it was part of the process of giving all sides a chance to make their case. The Sheltered Islander

By Sally Flynn

Shells Angels

SYDNEY (Reuters) Michael Perry Reporter: Australia's Hells Angels bikers will be forced to explain how they pay for their extravagant lifestyles with sports cars and high-end bikes after losing a court case brought by the Australian Crime Commission...Sports cars, Harley-Davidson motorcycles, drugs, firearms, computers and financial documents relating to biker activities were seized in recent police raids, said the newspaper...the 12 Hells Angels bosses were served with summonses to appear before the commission, to answer questions on tax fraud and their finances..."

I guess it was bound to come out sometime. Hells Angels gangs are worldwide now and have even reached Shelter Island, but in a milder, greener form: Shells Angels.

You've seen them, we all have. They ride their bikes everywhere, sometimes three or four abreast across the road, defying cars to pass and flipping the bird at them what drives too close. These wild rebels! They bike all over the Island. Speeding down long hills with their arms open wide like they'll lift off at any moment.

And the Shells Angels chicks, with their "Born to Be Mild" tattoos...peddling along with children strapped into plastic chairs on their fenders. Everyone knows that baby seats must be rear-facing, but these social miscreants flagrantly defy the law. To make matters worse, they're all in great shape and the boys wear Lycra shorts that leave nothing to the imagination.

And unlike their Hells Angels cousins, who drive crippled members in side cars and let fat members drive three wheelers, the Shells Angels don't have sidecars— just drag carts that they load with children or groceries. You can't drive an adult three-wheeler and be in their club. I know, because during my mid-life crisis, I tried.

"I want a shiny adult three-wheeler with an ice cream bell and red streamers on the handles."

"That we got, but you'll need special additional modifications, Ms. Flynn. We got a deal on some second-hand tires from the space shuttle that we think can take the pressure, a John Deere tractor seat on order and shocks from Peterbilt."

"I'm not going to stand out too much with all this special equipment am I?"

"No, no one will notice the space shuttle tires, but they will notice the large orange triangle on the back of your bike over the sign that says WIDE LOAD."

"I'm not really an orange person, can we get the triangle in a soft green or aqua, something a little more summery?"

"Nope, has to be legal."

"Well how am I going to express my rebel side? I wanna be a Shells Angel!"

"I dunno know. How about you go topless?"

"That's a great thought, but I'd be too worried about catching a boob in the chain or the spokes."

"Yeah, the Fire Department probably wouldn't appreciate trying to untangle you from that. You know, I know a guy I think I could hook you up with some hubcaps with double C's"

"Chanel hubcaps? Oh, that would make those skinny biker chicks jealous...I love it. I can just hear them talking about me now...Sally Flynn, rebel without a cause..."

"No, it'se, Sally Flynn, rebel without a clue."

"Chanel hubcaps, sparkling red streamers, baseball cards in the spokes, peeing in the woods...living on the edge, that's me..."

Hollywood Hits the Hamptons

By Kim Palmer

It's no secret that the television and film scene is no longer limited to the studios and streets of Los Angeles, with shows like "Sex and the City" and the "Real Housewives of NYC" filming on location in the Big Apple. What you might not be aware of is that the film crews are making their way out to the East End of Long Island with the growing popularity of the Hamptons and its star-studded streets.

This past Memorial Day weekend, Kate Hudson headed out to an oceanfront beach house on Flying Point Road in Watermill for a 6-day shoot of the movie Something Borrowed.

Based on the novel by Emily Griffin, and directed by Luke Greenfield, Something Borrowed stars Hudson as Darcy, an outgoing publicist, and Ginnifer Goodwin (He's Just Not That Into You) as Rachel, an attorney and self-confessed good girl. Best friends since elementary school, Darcy constantly outshines Rachel. However, on her 30th birthday, Rachel has a little too much to drink and ends up in bed with Darcy's extremely good-looking fiancé, played by Colin Egglesfield ("Melrose Place").

A majority of the film takes place in New York City, where both characters live and work, but the actors and crew of over 80 people trekked out to Water Mill to film the character's Memorial Day weekend soirée at the beach house.

Royal Pains
Rx
Some doctors still make house calls.

The actors may be back for another round in a couple of years if the film does well, as Alcon Entertainment has also bought the rights to the novel's sequel, Something Blue. The film also stars Steve Howey ("Reba") and John Krasinski ("The Office").

Perhaps the most popular of the Hamptons-based TV shows, "Royal Pains" began its second season on June 3, adding Henry Winkler to the cast. The show stars Mark Feuerstein and Paulo Costanza as brothers; Winkler will play their father. Feuerstein's character, Hank Lawson, is a young big-city emergency room doctor who is wrongfully blamed for a patient's death. After being fired, younger brother Evan (Costanza) convinces him to move out to the Hamptons, where he starts "HankMed," a concierge medical service.

The shows pilot was shot on location in Southampton Village, Bridgehampton and various other locations on the South Fork; however, the rest of the first season was filmed in a studio in Brooklyn, along with parts of Nassau and western Suffolk counties.

This season, the cast and crew plan to film in Southampton and at a Nassau County golf course, which they will play out as a Hamptons golf course. This past week, they filmed at Pellegrini Vineyards in Cutchogue.

Part-time Hamptons resident Matthew Broderick recently played his part in the East End's recent popularity, starring in the NBC pilot "Beach Lane," about a celebrity author who runs a small town newspaper. Although it was set in the Hamptons, the show was not filmed on location. Maybe that's part of the reason why NBC ditched the series after seeing the pilot.

Reality TV is certainly no stranger to the Hamptons. Several of the "Housewives of NYC" cast have been spotted on the East End, including Sonja Morgan, who was arrested on the morning of Memorial Day for Driving While Intoxicated in her BMW in Southampton. She was pulled over around 2 a.m. after allegedly neglecting to stop at a stop

Strawberries in High Season

By Stacy Dermont

"Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did."—Dr. William Butler, 17th Century English Writer

Everybody loves strawberries. This is a particularly abundant season for strawberries here on the East End. The season will end next month, so get out there! You can pick up local berries from any of the farmers markets and many supermarkets right now.

A popular food among Native Americans, the strawberry we eat today is a hybrid of a North American and a South American strain. It's cultivation as a roadside attraction on the East End took off with the arrival of the automobile.

The East End celebrates its strawberries. The Strawberry Tea at Cormaria and the Strawberry Jazz concert at Christ Church are just two of the many strawberry-themed events held in Sag Harbor annually. The Mattituck Lions Club Strawberry Festival, taking place June 18-20, includes (in addition to thousands of shortcakes, tarts and daiquiris) hot air balloons and a fireworks display. The Long Island Railroad is even offering day-trippers additional trains to this festival.

The United States is the leading producer of strawberries, supplying 20% of strawberries worldwide. California alone produces over three quarters of these berries, about a billion pounds a year. Long Island certainly produces a lot of strawberries and we eat a lot of them too.

There's nothing like picking your own. Round up some family or friends and head out to a local field. It doesn't take long to fill some baskets. Strawberries freeze beautifully and make a great, easy jam.

Susan Galardi

At Pikes, it's the berries

As delicious as strawberries are to eat, the berries as well as the leaves have been used by man for all kinds of purposes. They have been used to treat everything from gout to yellowed teeth. Is it a coincidence that strawberries are considered a sure cure for halitosis as well as an aphrodisiac?

Maybe you'd like to grow your own sweet, Long Island strawberries. Spring is a good time to plant for the following year. Strawberries require good irrigation and do not tolerate drought conditions. But they're not fussy about soil conditions. Some varieties are everbearing, like F. sylvestris semperflorens, which produces berries beginning in the summer and continues through the fall, sometimes even fruiting until the frost. You'll have to limit your strawberry plants, as they're happy to "take over" a garden patch because they multiply by sending out runners along the ground. Lots and lots of runners.

Strawberries do not ripen after they are picked. So don't pick them until they are fully ripened—unless you're making jam. A few less-than-ripe berries in jam increase the amount of natural pectin, the thickening agent.

All strawberries taste great in season and they are all rich in vitamin C, folic acid and fiber—but organic is best. Though native to North America, strawberries require a lot of pesticides for commercial production. Of the "dirty dozen" of pesticide-rich produce, strawberries rank third (behind celery and peaches).

Though more than half of American children choose strawberries as their favorite fruit, children six years old and younger should not be served red strawberries in any form. Even if a young child has enjoyed strawberries without reaction, another dose of strawberries may provoke skin irritation, hives or fever. Skin contact with strawberry products can cause this same reaction in the strawberry sensitive.

sign on First Neck Lane. Morgan failed the cop's sobriety test and refused the Breathalyzer. The actress has been charged with DWI, driving without a seatbelt, failure to keep right and failure to stop at a stop sign.

Last summer, MTV film crews headed out East for their own glimpse of the Hamptons in "True Life: I'm Hustling in the Hamptons." The show featured Jonny, a Hampton Bays native trying to take advantage of the summer scene by working in restaurants and catering so he can move out west to California, and Brittany, an African American gossip blogger from Harlem, aspiring to cover the Hamptons' party scene.The show featured several well-known spots, such as the Bridgehampton Polo Club, Neptunes Beach Club and the Southampton Inn.

So what will the summer have in store for the entertainment scene in the Hamptons? Rumor has it that Bobby Flay will be visiting the South Fork for his new series "Brunch at Bobby's" and that NYC's "High Society" may be moving to the East End for its second season.

Estate

explanation did not win the room. Major developer Robert Morrow (who also created the King Kullen development in Hampton Bays) did not address the crowd although he was in attendance.

The crux of the issue to an outsider is this: The community needs another supermarket since the present one is either too small, or is insufficient in addressing the immediate needs of the community. Perhaps the developers are using this need to push to rezone and build unwanted and unneeded commercial space and with the advantageous zoning change, make a tidy profit. The folks in the homes near the proposed development are saying. "not in my neighborhood," and the political leaders are weighing the rights of all as only they do when deciding. At George Washington University, Professor Purcell used to say, "Who gets what, when, where, and how."

I asked noted Southampton icon/business owner Henry Hildreth what he thought about the situation. He said, "Supermarket yes, strip mall NO!" But it was a woman named Frances who may have summed it all up best in a moment of levity, when she said beware of what you want, meaning another supermarket. Then she said she remembered that Southampton used to have three or four supermarkets, and all of those locations have become mega drug stores. She summed that trend up by saying the people of Southampton Village "are taking too many drugs and not eating enough."

Strawberries

But you yourself are definitely over six, so indulge. Stir some honey into a bowl of fresh-cut berries, pour it over a cake, biscuit or cookie and in short order you have a shortcake. Or try an easy strawberry facial: gently rub a handful of mashed strawberries over your face and neck, allow it to rest for 10 minutes, rinse and feel refreshed and radiant.

No discussion of strawberries is complete without a mention of rhubarb. It's also red and comes into season at the same time as strawberries, but rhubarb is kind of the opposite of strawberry. It's a very bitter stem vegetable.

Never was the expression "opposites attract" more true. With the addition of a liberal amount of sugar, and proper cooking, rhubarb's tart serves as the perfect foil to strawberry's sweet. Rhubarb is not readily available year-round, but it's easy to freeze. Just rinse, cut into one-inch chunks and seal tightly. The leaves are highly toxic, in fact you can place them on your garden to keep down weeds.

I'm partial to the fresh strawberries at The Green Thumb in Water Mill and to the strawberry-rhubarb pies and jams at the Hayground Farmers Market (Friday afternoons). The romance languages refer to the strawberry as some variation of "fraise," which means "fragrant." Those who shop at farmers markets will confirm the Latin name as an apropos description.

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

It must be Father's Day, the mountain laurel are blooming! That's the truth; it blooms just in time for fathers to enjoy the beauty of the laurel and fun on their special day. Let's smell the laurel and do some shopping!

My friend Blaise and I stopped into Sunrise Fence, 1470 North Sea Road, Southampton (near Joe's Garage), for a look at some of the custom and deer fencing, driveway gates, arbors, pergola, ornamental fences and others that come in cedar, bamboo, Trex, chain link and/or maintenance-free PVC. Owner Eugene Morris helped Blaise choose an arbor, gate and fence to surround his house, and to my amazement he was at his home to measure the very next day. 631-287-2955.

Nearby at Hildreth's Home Goods store, Main Street, Southampton and Montauk Highway, East Hampton, do not pass up the unique and interesting new merchandise that has just arrived for the summer season. Just to mention a few that are shown in the photo, Haven five piece sectional by Barlow Tyrie, 39" square teak coffee table ($685), Dash and Alert stripe cotton throw blanket ($58) and red stripe pillows ($38), vintage galvanized metal party tub ($47.99), ice bucket with scoop ($44.99), layered brick candle burns 100 hours (sale $55), wrought iron stand on sale ($59), Pacific bamboo grill spatula and grill brush (sale $15), Sea life citronella candles ($13.50 to $29), round rattan flatware caddy (sale $42.99), Blue Fiesta Flatware sold by pieces, (sale $2.50 each) and non-breakable wine goblets (sale $8.99). Also, look for kids' summer toys that will bring hours of fun on the beach.

At Patio.com, 1 Montauk Highway, Southampton, stop in and check out what's new, thrilling and exciting for Dads this weekend on his special day, and Grads on theirs. There are sizzling savings on grills, affordable lounges and let us not forget the Brunswick Pool tables...There is a 25% off sale on any of their thousands of items until June 20. So get going!

The Water Mill Museum, 41 Old Mill Road, has cleaned out their closets and you know what that means! Antique lovers should stop by to see what's on sale, with the museum practically giving some of their merchandise away. Look for wood bookbinding devices, glass bottles, a silk US flag, framed needlepoint portraits, and more. The museum hours and information are posted at watermillmuseum.org

Country Gear, 2408 Main Street, Bridgehampton, where you find unique and unusual, as well as casual and traditional furnishings, is celebrating the season with a pre-summer "Backyard and Basement Sale!" They are offering huge discounts on outdoor furniture as well as indoor clearance items that include dining tables, chairs, cabinets, accessories and more! The sale will continue through June, every day 10 a.m.-5 p.m.

A Little of What You Fancy, one of the last mom-and-pop shops left in East Hampton village, is celebrating 30 years on Newtown Lane. For this special occasion, the Fancy is showcasing local artists and craftspeople including Jamie Gregor and Martin Ross's gorgeous black walnut tables, Christopher Jarrett and Walter Us' sublime oil paintings, Gabriele Raacke's paintings on glass, Roisin Bateman's pastels, Pino Daddi's sculptures and Will Ryan and Trish Franey's mixed media art. The Fancy is also proud to represent Albert Lester's hand-carved clamshells in the shape of birds, animals, Indian chiefs, and mermaids, and still stock their staples, like Kiehl's all natural soaps and fragrances, Kerry Cassill's luxurious Indian cotton fabrics and Mast Brother's Chocolate. You will also find great locally-made jewelry, watercolors and photographs. Stop by for a unique Father's Day or hostess gift. The Fancy is completely dedicated to ecologically friendly products.

Nearby at Khanh Sports, 60 Park Place, East Hampton, look for The Hampton Classic Horse Show favorites, that include designer and sports sunglasses to the tune of over 4,000 different pairs for the picky and choosey...There are Maui Jim, Ray Ban, Oakley, Persoi, Coasta del Mar, Native, and so much more. Look for balance, boogie, skate and surfboards, party shirts, bathing suits, sandals, sun dresses, scooters, ping pong tables, and so much more at this one stop shop! 631-324-0703

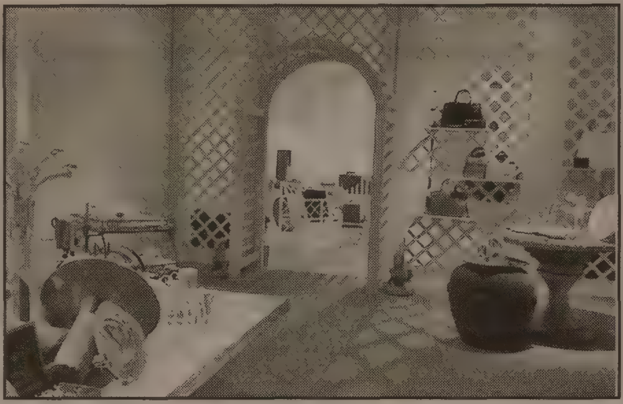
NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK

WITH MARIA TENNARIELLO



Asprey, Southampton

THE WHALEBONE GENERAL STORE

3495 Noyac Road, Sag Harbor, 631-725-2277

For all of us who dearly missed this little shop of wonders on Noyac Road, you will be happy to know that after almost two years, The Whalebone Store returns, bigger, better, and happier than ever! Linda Heine has put this store back together with a fashionable new look. On the "West Side" of the shop, a huge inventory of gifts, greeting cards and truffles, "Party Hardy" and "Sunday Bash", and a Kids Corner with a new line of puzzles and creative toys from Doug and Melissa. A full line of inspirational plaques, Blue Glass wind chimes, candle holders from National Geographic collection, weathered signs by local artist Kris Neilsen, tea lights and Lottery will be back soon. On the "East Side," Woodstock Chime collection, birdhouses, hooked rugs, placemats, napkins and napkin rings, shells and shell soaps from Two's Company. There are also a few surprises and good values. Grand Opening is Sunday, June 13, 3 p.m. for friends and neighbors. The Whalebone opens officially, Monday, June 14, at 7 a.m.

ASPREY

45 Main Street, Southampton, 631-488-4016, asprey.com.

Asprey British Luxury Goods Company has opened a summer shop themed as an English walled-in garden in a 1,500 sqare foot space. Asprey is world renowned for fine jewellery, watches, clocks, leather goods, silver, china, crystal, rare books and its unrivaled bespoke service. The boutique features white walls, sisal carpeting, and lattice backdrops, and was conceived by visual designer James Lavenstein for Asprey. Furniture throughout the store includes 18th and 19th century stone garden furniture and whimsical objects such as small stone creatures, all from Anthony Garden Boutique, located in Manhattan. Products in the store include the ever-popular sterling silver wedding and baby gifts, crystal, china, jewellery, fine leather goods, and iconic games, such as backgammon. Store hours are Monday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sundays Noon to 5 p.m.

ORGANIC AVENUE

28 Jobs Lane, Southampton, 631-283-2600, organicavenue.com.

Organic Avenue is a new venue where you can stop and enjoy cold-pressed organic juices, raw food soups, salads, entrees and desserts and homemade organic snacks, served in an airy, white, beachy space. Additionally, the store will be the exclusive carrier in the town of Southampton of Intelligent Nutrients by Horst, certified, organic health and beauty products, including plant-based hair care, skin care, super foods and supplements. "Our mission is to spread Love," said Denise Mari, founder and executive director of Organic Avenue, which is the leading provider of organic cold-pressed juices, raw food and cleansing programs. Its celebrity following includes Gwyneth Paltrow, Alicia Silverstone, Liev Schreiber, Naomi Watts, Russell Simmons, Matt Dillon and L.A. Reid, among others. Open seven days a week 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. through mid-October, with potential for delivery, and it will re-open each year on Memorial Day.

Atlantis WeatherGear, based in the sailing town of Marblehead, Massachusetts, unveiled their new flagship store in the heart of Southampton, Atlantis by Peter Elliot. Atlantis' presence in the Hamptons represents a kind of "homecoming" for the brand as Atlantis was based in Sag Harbor until 1985. The current owners, a group of passionate sailors from Marblehead, purchased the brand in 2007. Since then, Atlantis has re-established itself as a premiere coastal lifestyle brand with a line of apparel that covers the range from a day on the water to an evening on the town. The hope is that the store's customer base will include a mix of sailors, anglers and casual boaters as well as folks who just want to look the part. The new store, a "coastal lifestyle" theme offers a mix of performance sailing apparel, sailing-inspired sportswear and accessories geared to help enthusiasts enjoy life on and around the water as well as on the town. Store hours will be

Monday through Saturday 10:30 a.m.-7 p.m. and Sundays 11 a.m.–6 p.m.

LA VIE ORGANIC

Accabonac, 631-680-9986/603-748-0166, lavieorganic.com.

With nowhere to get real great organic, sophisticated veggies, Pamela Willoughby and Bridget LeRoy have teamed up to form La Vie Organic by delivering organic farm fresh produce and green cuisine to your home in the Hamptons from the world-class Satur Farms on the North Fork. La Vie Organic features award-winning Catapano Dairy Farm goat cheese and other specialty items, along with prepared foods and other delectable treats, including organic chocolates and key lime pies, just to name a few. La Vie, can whip up catering small parties, BBQs, brunches, picnics and the "best darn veggies" and goat cheese that you will ever taste. If you want homemade bouillabaisse stock- Pamela learned from an old chef from Marseille, it takes two days to make at $50 a quart, you can have that too. And yes, you can freeze it! Pamela makes rouille and croutons for the soup also. Don't sweat the heavy traffic; place your order before Tuesday afternoon to get a Friday delivery.

If you are a new business, (New Kid On The Block), e-mail me at: newkids@danspapers.com, so I can let my readers know all about you.

So Much Is New!

Over The Barrel... with Lenn Thompson

With the Memorial day holiday behind us, the busy season has begun out in our local wine country — and it sure has been busy already.

First, two new tasting rooms have joined the main wine trail along Route 25 on the North Fork — Sherwood House Vineyards and McCall Vineyards. You might recognize Sherwood House, they have had (and continue to have) a small tasting shed smack-dab in the middle of their vineyard just off of Route 48, but they've opened a new tasting room in Jamesport, right on the main drag. If you enjoy Old World-styled chardonnay, they are a must-stop.

If you're a North Fork wine lover, you'd probably driven past McCall Vineyards a million times without even realizing it. McCall is that vineyard directly across the street from Pellegrini Vineyards. Owner Russ McCall has been selling his fruit to Long island and upstate New York wineries for years, but now has his own wines available in a new tasting room.

In other news, Rich Olsen-Harbich, long-time winemaker at Raphael in Peconic has resigned that post to take over head winemaking duties at Bedell Cellars, joining a winemaking team that includes Bedell's founder and now founding winemaker Kip Bedell and consultant Pascal Marty. Bedell's owner Michael Lynne described his new winemaking team as "a dream situation for us" when I spoke with him last week, pointing to Olsen-Harbich's "experience, accomplishment and knowledge" as three key reasons for the hiring. Olsen-Harbich describes his departure from Raphael, where he's served as head winemaker for more than a decade, as amicable, adding "I was winemaker at Raphael for 14 years and did a lot. I was ready to pursue new challenges. I look forward to working with people at Bedell that I've known and respected for a long time — Dave Thompson (vineyard manager) and Donna Rudolph (assistant vineyard manager), Trent (Preszler, CEO) and of course Kip, who I've known and been friends with for many years."

"I'm excited. I haven't been excited like this in a few years. This is a great opportunity for me."

Osprey's Dominion Vineyard has also just released its first Carmenere, an original Bordeaux grape that is now much more popular in Chile.

As far as I know, this is the only carmenere being made on the East Coast.

Given the success growers and winemakers have had with the other Bordeaux varieties (even cabernet sauvignon planted in the right places in the right years) it's maybe a bit surprising that this is the first carmenere here, but before I tasted it, I still wondered if they'd be able to ripen this grape fully to minimize the bell pepper flavors that can come from under-ripe grapes (sound familiar?).

Maybe they have it planted in a spot in their vineyard where reds ripen particularly well, or maybe it's just because this wine came from the hot, dry 2007 season, but this wine shows none of that green pepper character. In fact, this wine almost seems overripe in some of it's aromas and flavors.

Ripe, almost port-like aromas of dried cherry, fig and sweet red cherry are layered with those of Chinese five spice, cedar and green peppercorns.

Juicy on the palate with medium-soft tannins, rich cherry fruit, more five spice, toasty oak and clove mingle with a bit of smoke and sweet herbs. The dried fruit and fig character comes back on a medium finish.

A fine first effort, I'm curious to taste the 2008 and 2009 editions of this.

Dissonance: Bay Street's Solid Season Opener

By Susan M. Galardi

When musicians talk about their professional obligations, they don't say they're going to work; they say they're going to play.

In the stage piece Dissonance, which opened last week at the Bay Street Theatre, the word 'play' takes on a greater meaning.

The story follows five musicians – a string quartet and an interloping rock star – on the days preceding the quartet's debut at Carnegie Hall. They talk about playing their instruments, playing the notes on the page, playing Carnegie Hall. But what the audience sees most clearly is how they play each other.

Bay Street is off to a strong start with this, their first Mainstage production of the season. In preview, the show was already moving along quite well – a fine-tuned cast with solid direction, in a play that is funny, dramatic and challenging. In short, it works.

Written by Damian Lanigan and directed by Broadway veteran/Tony-nominated Lonny Price (A Class Act, 110 in the Shade and Master Harold…and the boys), Dissonance personifies the interrelationship of members in a string quartet, their personal dynamics mirroring their musical relationships.

Consider the first violin, the lead instrument in a quartet, personified by James (Daniel Gerroll) and acted with confidence and ease. He's the leader musically, the decision maker. The group is named after him, and the others seem to respect him for both his musicianship and his place as the head of the group both on and off the stage.

Rosie Benton, Gregory Wooddell

Except for Hal, who plays second violin. That dynamic is not so much a dissonant quarter-tone but a clash of cymbals. Hal (Morgan Spector, in another strong performance) refuses to play second fiddle, at least during rehearsals. He and James spar like dueling divas. At one point, Hal seems to get the upper hand when he manipulates James into a new, more democratic rehearsal strategy.

That scene is surprising, since all along James is as unbending as a petrified bow. It seems like a fault of the playwright to see this character relent, even though he is feeling vulnerable at that time having learned that his former violin master teacher will come to the concert – thanks to Hal. In this turn, it seems that Hal has played James like a fiddle, but there is a surprising coda to this movement that shows who the maestro really is.

In a string quartet, first violin takes the melody, the cello takes the bass, and second violin and viola are "inner voices," filling in the harmonies. As the violist, and James' younger brother, Paul is beyond background, he's the rag that wipes the bow. Robert Stanton plays the character as ultra submissive – he doesn't fill in, he fades into the scenery. Just when you start to feel Stanton's portrayal is a bit on-the-nose, he (and the character) shock us, moving into new territory, rising to the occasion in some dramatic and pointed scenes, with all the repressed emotion finally cutting through the orchestra like Birgit Nillson blasting "The Ride of the Valkyries."

Cellist Beth (Rosie Benton) holds her ground as the musical bedrock of the group, and holds her temper, opting not to get in the middle between Hal and James. But she's already there—the subject of a secret obsession by James, and a former lover of Hal's. Rosie is the one who dares to take a step outside this dysfunctional family. A opportunity to tutor the young millionaire rock star (Jonny, played by Gregory Wooddell), opens her mind to music and opens her mouth with painfully honest disclosures to

Los Lonely Boys at WHBPAC

By Tiffany Rizzano

Aptly dubbing their sound "Texican rock 'n' roll," Austin, Texas-based Los Lonely Boys will head to the Hamptons on June 19, performing at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center. Combining elements of country, Tejano, blues, classic rock and soul, this Grammy Award-winning band of brothers – Henry, Jojo and Ringo Garza – continues to garner fans of all styles of music with their unique sound. "We try to weave everything into our musical burrito," the band said.

The group has only been back on the road for the past few weeks, after taking some time off and cancelling a slew of dates in April and May after Jojo, bassist and vocalist, was diagnosed with lesions on his vocal chords. His physicians recommended the time off and the group had to begrudgingly cancel shows so he could take the time to rest. Now they're eager to get back on stage and hit the road again. And Jojo is doing well. "[He] is very much enjoying getting back on stage," the band said. "He is healing and is slowly easing back into the vocal spotlights."

Unfortunately, his vocal problems forced the band to put off the release of their next planned release, which had been set for this coming fall. But, the group said, they hope to release it early next year and they said fans should expect an album of songs that will make you want to move. "These new recordings rock and groove," the band said. "We found guitar tones that really reflect the mood for which we wrote these songs for – very strong tones and grooves."

This will be their first album of original material released since they left Epic Records, which is owned by Sony Music Entertainment, in 2009. It will also be the first album released by the collaboration of their own label, Lonely Tone Records, and Playing In Traffic Records, another Austin area indie label, owned by their manager, which will distribute and market the album. But the band said there's no bad blood with Epic; it was just time for a change. "We were grateful for what we accomplished with Epic Records and all the people who worked there," the band members said. "It was just time to bring the business closer to home, especially in this time of

Dissonance

Hal.

Wooddell plays the rock star with appropriate edge and lack of inhibition. Jonny wears life like a loose garment; Beth wears it like a straight jacket – a tailored one at that. She is hair pulled back in a barrette, in polite clothing. He is hair exploding off his scalp, barefoot, in a flowing purple shirt.

By and large, this is a strong ensemble cast – good actors who know their characters, and committed to the direction of the play. Standouts the night we went (in preview) were Gerroll and Spector. Wooddell only fell a little short in his singing – wish his vocal chops were as strong as his acting skills. After a slow start, Spector ended up giving a more varied emotional performance. Benton was the emotional bedrock – but perhaps a bit too prudish. Maybe it was a conception that cellists are bookish and proper. I went to music school with many of them – they're not.

If you're a trained musician or aced college music appreciation class, you'll get an extra bang for your buck with inside jokes, like James talking about the development of western music, "The rot set in with Beethoven." Or the groups' need to pander to the audience with 'easy' music like Mozart. "God am I sick of that bastard. Why not throw in a Russian to keep the women and drunks happy?" says James.

Set Designer Jim Noone hit some nice marks. In Jonny's pad, the stiff white chair was just right for Beth, the snakelike leather lounger for him. A mural of Jonny dominates his space, as it should.

Kudos to Lighting Designer Kirk Bookman. Horizontal shadows (from slat blinds?) across the back of the rehearsal space evoked lines on the staff, and the final scene is visually dramatic – I won't give it away.

Dissonance runs through Sunday, June 27. Tuesday through Saturday 8 p.m., and Sundays at 7 p.m., matinees Wednesdays 2 p.m., Saturdays 4 p.m. Tickets: $55 and $65; limited number of $99 subscriptions – one ticket to each Mainstage show. Tickets: 631-725-9500; Box Office, Long Wharf, Sag Harbor.

Tony Predictions

By Gordin & Christiano

BEST PLAY: Red – John Logan's play about artist Mark Rothko will probably take the prize. However, Geoffrey Naufts' gay romantic comedy, Next Fall, is probably the best new play on Broadway this season.

BEST MUSICAL: Memphis – A tight race with American Idiot and Fela!, Memphis already won Drama Desk and Outer Critic Circle awards.

BEST REVIVAL OF A PLAY: Fences – August Wilson's Pulitzer Prize winner starring Denzel Washington should edge out Miller's A View from the Bridge.

BEST REVIVAL OF A MUSICAL: La Cage aux Folles – Terry Johnson's re-envisioned revival, set in a drag club on the French Rivera, is a splendid delight. The brilliant revival of Ragtime closed months ago.

BEST PERFORMANCE BY A LEADING ACTRESS IN A PLAY: Viola Davis in Fences – Davis blows the roof off the Court Theater with her searing portrayal of Rose Troy.

BEST PERFORMANCE BY A LEADING ACTOR IN A PLAY: Alfred Molina in Red – Clearly the most deserving, but Liev Schreiber (A View From the Bridge) won the Drama Desk, while Denzel Washington (Fences) took the Outer Critic Circle. Either could upset Molina, who won the Drama League Award.

BEST PERFORMANCE BY A LEADING ACTRESS IN A MUSICAL: Montego Glover in Memphis – She tied with Catherine Zeta Jones (A Little Night Music) at the Drama Desk and Outer Critics Circle, but her powerful singing should win her the Tony Award. If these two split the vote, the enchanting Sherie Rene Scott (Everyday Rapture) might surprise.

BEST PERFORMANCE BY A LEADING ACTOR IN A MUSICAL: Douglas Hodge in La Cage aux Folles – He delivers a dazzling complex portrait, although Chad Kimball (Memphis) and Sahr Ngaujah (Fela!) were superb.

BEST PERFORMANCE BY A FEATURED ACTRESS IN A PLAY: Scarlett Johansson in A View from the Bridge – Not our choice, but probably the winner. Rosemary Harris (The Royal Family) would be our vote, or Jan Maxwell (Lend Me a

Love Lost in Haiti: A Benefit for the Whole Family

By Allyson Zacharoff

Crispinelli in Haiti

The January earthquake in Haiti has faded from the minds of many Hamptonites as their daily lives resume, but for one group, its impact will never fade, as they remember their friend Stephanie Crispinelli, from Katonah, New York. She was only 19 when she died in the earthquake on January 12.

Out of this tragedy has come a positive effort on the part of close friends of Crispinelli and more than 50 members of the local business community. This Saturday, the benefit, Love Lost in Haiti, featuring raffles, auctions and live music will honor Crispinelli's memory.

Stephanie Crispinelli traveled to Haiti in January on a college service trip from Lynn University in Louisiana with 13 other people. They arrived on January 11 and began helping the less fortunate immediately, but their efforts were cut short when, on the second day of their trip, the earthquake hit and their hotel collapsed, killing six of the people in their group—Stephanie among them.

It took several weeks for the Crispinelli family to receive definitive information about their daughter's death. When they got confirmation, they quickly decided to find a way to honor her life. The family has set up the Stephanie Crispinelli Humanitarian Fund in support of the teenager's dedication to helping the less fortunate "both in this country and abroad," according to Sharman Peddy, the mother of one of Crispinelli's college roommates.

The grieving process for Crispinelli's three roommates, all from the East Hampton, has been extremely difficult. When they heard about the Fund, they knew they wanted to get involved.

As a result, the three girls, with the support of many others, organized Love Lost in Haiti. Through a widespread community effort, that includes donations from over 50 local vendors for the raffle auction, the event has grown to extraordinary proportions. "We're expecting a big turnout," Peddy said, estimating between 100 and 200 people.

Love Lost in Haiti will take place on Saturday, June 12 from 3-6 p.m. at Ziggy's Restaurant in Bridgehampton. Admission is $10 for adults and free for children under 10. It will feature music by the popular drumming group, Dan Bailey and Living Rhythm, mixing reggae and African drumming. "Stephanie would've liked that," Peddy said. Dan Bailey started an organization himself to help in the earthquake relief, called Hamptons for Haiti. With regard to Saturday's event, Bailey said that he "wanted to continue supporting similar causes."

The evening will include a raffle and silent auction. Items include a Doug Kuntz aerial photograph of your home, a baseball signed by Alex Rodriguez, and a ride in an antique airplane from East Hampton airport.

What began as three grieving girls trying to remember their friend, has truly grown into an evening that will prove a strong reminder of how fragile and precious life really is.

Love Lost in Haiti will take place on Saturday June 12 from 3 to 6 p.m., rain date Sunday June 13, at Ziggy's,964 Bridgehampton-Sag Harbor Turnpike, Bridgehampton. For more information, e-mail sarina.peddy@gmail.com.

changing methods for labels."

Los Lonely Boys released three albums of original music for Epic. Their first, self-titled released, put out in 2004, earned them a Grammy for Best Pop Performance by a Duo or Group with Vocal for their hit single "Heaven," which reached #1 on the Adult Contemporary chart and #16 on the Billboard Hot 100. They were also nominated for subsequent Grammys. Their last album on Epic, 1969, an EP released in 2009, was a tribute to music from the year 1969. "Through time we realized that a lot of the magical music came from artists and songs from that special year of 1969," the band said.

Growing up in Texas, Los Lonely Boys started out as a backup band for their father, who also played in a band with his brothers, The Falcones, which performed conjunto music around southern Texas in the 1970s and 1980s. The name Los Lonely Boys comes from a song their father wrote for them when they were children. "I'm just a lonely boy," was one of the lines from that song. To reflect their Mexican-American heritage, they used "los" instead of "the."

Los Lonely Boys will be at WHBPAC on June 19 at 8 p.m. Tickets $100/$85/$70. For info about the band: loslonelyboys.com. Tickets or info on the show: 631-288-1500 or whbpac.org.

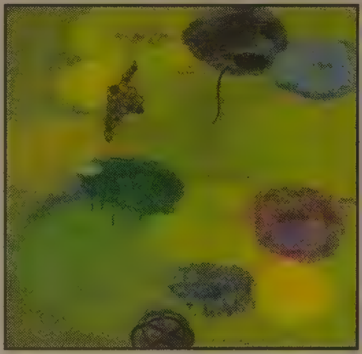
New Work at Sara Nightingale



Stabilito: Untitled Green

Shelter Island is now the new residence of the Sara Nightingale Gallery, formerly housed in Water Mill. This isn't news to its fans; in fact, the venue has been up and running since last summer. Shelter Island as an area for art is another story, but suffice it to say that the locale is perfect for the establishment of galleries. It's surrounded by water, alive with history and character, and filled with charming architecture, much of which dates from the Victorian Age.

The Sara Nightingale Gallery, while not housed in a "painted lady," is a unique place of its own. There's a small gallery downstairs and an apartment upstairs, proving that art flourishes in all kinds of spaces. Moreover, it appears as if the gallery has changed its focus somewhat, from conceptual art and subjects dealing with political issues, like feminism, to more formal concerns, like use of color and coposition.

Last month's exhibit featured work by Joseph Stabilito, who lives on New York's Lower East Side. His paintings fit right in with the local natural environment. They are certainly abstract and reminiscent of Monet's Water Lilies or Mark Rothko's pieces, according to Sara Nightingale.

What is unique about Stabilito's work is the play of boldness against delicacy—a characteristic also seen in his other paintings (on view in the gallery's apartment) where his organic forms float and glide through space. But we also see Rothko's influences more succinctly. Even works by local artist James Kennedy look somewhat similar.

Stabilito's paintings on the second floor of the gallery are darker and more dense, reminding us of the sea. Although the work is hung in the kitchen, we lose sight of the surroundings. Limited space doesn't seem to matter and other artists are also served well in the various small rooms. Consider Eric Dever's grid-like abstractions and vertical lines recalling Ross Bleckner's early "wallpaper" pieces. The configurations give structure and stability to the setting, yet there's whimsy at work as well.

In the apartment's bathroom, Christian Little's endeavors are a different matter. They feature figurative narratives unlike anyone else's works. His "Confetti Geyser" is playful, colorful and upbeat. So are sculptures by Jennie Nichols. If they remind us of shoes, it's because they are shoes. One even looks like the flower, Jack-in-the-Pulpit. We remember them especially from Nightingale's Gallery in Water Mill; they are the kinds of shapes that are idiosyncratic from top to bottom.

Elsewhere in the apartment you'll find Gus Yero's abstract and colorful circles—again full of playfulness and energy. All the works, in fact, make us want to jump for joy.

The current show will be on view until the end of July. Call 631-793-2256 for information.

Tenor).

BEST PERFORMANCE BY A FEATURED ACTOR IN A PLAY: Eddie Redmayne in Red – Why he's in this category doesn't make sense. He co-stars with Alfred Molina, and that may give him the win.

BEST PERFORMANCE BY A FEATURED ACTRESS IN A MUSICAL: Katie Finneran in Promises, Promises – She was the best thing about the weak revival and won the Drama Desk.

BEST PERFORMANCE BY A FEATURED ACTOR IN A MUSICAL: Levi Kreis in Million Dollar Quartet – He tears up the stage as Jerry Lee Lewis, but Kevin Chamberlin (The Addams Family) would be our choice.

BEST ORIGINAL SCORE: David Bryan (Music) & Joe DiPetro (Lyrics) for Memphis – The pair have been cleaning up and we look for them to continue. Their music and lyrics are the most original on Broadway this season.

BEST BOOK OF A MUSICAL: Everyday Rapture by Dick Scanlan and Sherie Rene Scott – We are looking for them to pull off a big upset over Memphis. This clever little show, moved to Broadway at the last minute, is a real sleeper and this could be a well-deserved surprise.

BEST DIRECTION OF A PLAY: Michael Grandage for Red – Grandage also helmed a marvelous Hamlet and the dual memory will carry him to the winner's circle over Kenny Leon (Fences).

BEST DIRECTION OF A MUSICAL: Terry Johnson for La Cage aux Folles – His scaled down re-staging from London is dazzling.

Theater critics Barry Gordin & Patrick Christiano are members of the Drama Desk. Barry is an internationally renowned photographer. Patrick is the artistic director of SivaRoad Productions and a member of the 2009/2010 Drama Desk nominating committee.

Simple Art of Cooking Silvia Lehrer

Eating From the Farmer's Market

The growing interest in local, sustainably grown foods is reflected by the growing list of vendors and attendance at farmers markets on the East End. There is an air of discovery as you waltz through the markets visiting and chatting with vendors offering the best of the East End, whether unusual or familiar vegetables, flowers, artisanal cheeses, pastas, jams, dips, honey, pickles and baked goods ready to take home for lunch or dinner.

Some of the goodies you will encounter at the Sag Harbor farmers market are Dale & Bette's organic produce offering bamboo shoots; yes I said bamboo shoots, which I took home and stir-fired with their tat soi greens in Asian vinaigrette with much success. Or stop by for Bees Needs honeys with 3 different seasonal varieties; Mecox Bay Dairy's delicious range of artisanal cheeses; Open-Minded Organics fresh and dried shitake and oyster mushrooms as well as dried morel, chanterelle and more. Gerry Woodhouse, a certified organic grower from Peconic brings her Taste of the North Fork to the South Fork with her locally produced jams and jellies, dips, pestos and more. Gerry also represents North Fork Potato Chip Company's kettle cooked potato chips made with their own local potatoes and Catapano Dairy Farm with their herd of goats creating award winning chevre, feta, and yogurt at the market. Move along to Quail Hill Organic Farms wide selection of produce then look for Regina's of East Hampton with her berry fruit tarts and tomato tarts to come. Continue past the canopied stands to select delectable baked goods, such as onion and spinach tarts, French style, at Martine's; Blue Duck breads, muffins, scones and croissants; Simply Fresh Seafood offers the catch of the day from shellfish to monkfish – be sure to bring a cooler for the just caught fish! Continue on to A.Sisters Food Co. with Mansell & Lyman's traditional fettucine made in a variety of flavors including spinach, mushroom, lemon pepper and tomato basil and their variety of lemonades in recycled wine bottles. Speaking of wine, stop by for a taste of Roman Roth's Grapes of Roth's refreshingly crisp Riesling and fully ripe Merlot. "These are the grapes, said Roman that put the wine of New York on the map."

The markets on the East End include Westhampton Beach and continue through Southampton village, Hayground in Bridgehampton, Sag Harbor, East Hampton and Montauk village. Follow the markets as you visit through spring, summer and fall to discover the variety of ingredients and products as the seasons unfold.

MESCLUN SALAD WITH SESAME VINAIGRETTE AND MACADAMIA NUTS

Greens currently abound at the farmers market.
Yield: 4 servings

1/2 pound mesclun greens

Sesame Vinaigrette
2 tablespoons soy sauce
2 tablespoons rice vinegar
1 tablespoon mirin (syrupy rice wine)
1 teaspoon sesame oil
Kosher salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1/3 cup coarsely chopped macadamia nuts plus extra for garnish

Wash and spin-dry salad greens then roll and wrap in a length of paper towel to absorb excess moisture. If mesclun is refrigerated, bring to room temperature and place in a large bowl.

In a small mixing bowl stir vinaigrette ingredients and salt and pepper to taste.

A Gift Bag is So Much More with Madison & Mulholland

By David Lion Rattiner

The goodie bag. It is sort of a Hamptons staple. You head out to a party or a charity fundraiser and you get a goodie bag. Sometimes you get a t-shirt, maybe a key chain, maybe a free drink card to a restaurant. Whatever is in them is always fun, it's like getting a little Christmas present after attending a party.

Madison & Mulholland, owned by Jane Ubell-Meyer, brings the idea of a gift bag to a whole new level of marketing a product, and her business has been hitting the Hamptons in the form of events, branding, shopping technologies, and of course, gift bags. It all started nearly a decade ago when, "About nine years ago a friend of mine said to me, 'why don't we do gift bags in the Hamptons?' and at the time I said okay what does that mean?" Jane explains.

The Luxurious Madison & Mulholland Gift Bag

In 2001 that conversation started up a company called Buzz Bags, which started delivering bags of goodies for parties. Finding some success, Jane wanted the concept to expand and created Madison & Mulholland. Today, thanks to her company, the gift bag business goes much further than just a gift bag at a party. This year her gift bags have a lot more legs thanks to the Hampton Luxury Liner and its not just about the gifts in the bags, its about extending the brand. "It's not just a product in a bag any more, they also get media exposure," Jane explains.

She went further to describe an event that can extend the brands and the products that her company represents. "We're doing all kinds of events this year. For example, we're creating an onboard dating boot camp July 17 with Tamsan Fadal, the morning anchor of WPIX television and her husband Matt Titus, who have a dating company. So we are going to have dating games and mini seminars on board the Luxury Liner for people who sign up. You'll be able to find a date as you travel out to the Hamptons."

This has brought in a lot of companies who are interested in the service. Some clients to name just a few are John Varvatos, Porsche Design, The Artists Alliance of East Hampton, Smith River Kitchens, Annana's Spa, Harper Collins, Equinox, William Greenberg Desserts who do New York's best black and white cookies, Altoids Smalls and others.

On top of this, the company is offering a catalogue to read on the bus, which is sort of like the in-flight magazine, "Sky Mall" but will be located on the Hamptons Luxury Liner. The catalogue will offer products that can be purchased through a new technology that allows consumers to buy with their smartphones. Jane is calling the entire service and experience Shopmobi. Using very advanced technology and a camera phone, Shopmobi offers a new experience in shopping. "People can use the barcode and take a picture of it with their smart phone then be directed to the website where you can make a purchase or get more information automatically. This is being used today in Europe and in Asia. We're launching Shopmobi on the Hamptons Luxury Liner on July 31 which is the same weekend as Super Saturday, so you can start shopping on board as you head out," she explains. "You can also make reservations for dinner with the program, make spa reservations and a lot of many different things."

This new technology is really amazing having seen it in action.

A goodie bag is no longer just a "gift bag"--it's now a powerful vehicle to reach thousands of people through product placement, social media and traditional media. Imagine you place a product in a gift bag and in one weekend, it's e-blasted to 26,000 Hampton Luxury Liner subscribers, 50,000+ Dan's Papers readers and thousands more through television, the web and magazines. Madison & Mulholland has created an affordable "multi-layered" approach for small and large businesses, which include PR, advertising, and sampling opportunities for an affluent demographic.

Who would have thought so much could go into a gift bag?

A Scent Party with Sue Phillips

The "Scent Party" In Sag Harbor

By T.J. Clemente

Having written somewhere over 1400 articles for Dan's Papers and the Montauk Pioneer I have the privilege to attend many functions, parties, and charity events. But recently I added something new to my resume, I covered an afternoon party to help create your own personal scent hosted by legendary Susan "Sue" Phillips, whose experience in the field has launched many famous lines of scents for a few of the leading international brands over the years. Ms. Phillips, now President of Scenterprises Ltd., is a recognized international fragrance expert, who created, developed and launched TIFFANY perfume for their 150th anniversary, as well as numerous other internationally successful fragrances. Her career includes executive positions at Elizabeth Arden, Lancôme and Tiffany & Company, as well as consulting and branding initiatives for companies such as Avon, Bath & Body Works, Burberrys, Chanel, Lancaster, Oilily and Trish McEvoy, to name a few. Overlooking North Sea in Sag Harbor while being served wine and treats, Susan Philips explained what a signature your scent is, it made me think of how many times someone has passed me and I said, "Wow! That smells really good." The flip side is of course, "OMG please move away."

Susan Philips presented a collection of 18 scents to use to customize your scent that would be then bottled right there and is available in two sizes in bottles where you select the color. All this for around $145 to $175 depending on the size. Just recently a major publication ran an article on how important your scent is in mating. How it either draws in or repulses people you meet. The idea of consulting with an expert like Susan Philips and then creating a scent that will both achieve your personal goals and make you smell really special is quite a treat and a great idea for a party. Ms. Philips is available for both private consultations and parties. Born in South Africa, her professional presence resonates a level of security knowing her many years of experience as a leader in this field is now at your disposal. She explained if you were to go elsewhere to create your own scent it could easily cost up to $1500. She actually keeps records of each patron's unique personalized signature fragrance, issuing them a Certificate of Registration for the ease of reordering.

At the party everyone sat around as Sue explained the essence of the 18 scents and the powers and scopes of what each one achieves and how to best bundle them. Everyone was thrilled as they sampled the scents and chose. It was both fun and in the end productive as each party attendee left with there newly created personal scent. I let my fiancée Cindi create one for herself in lieu of me creating one. She now proudly wears it and it does smell really good. To create a party or just to contact Sue Phillips of Scenterprises call 917-449-1134 or email: or visit Scenterprises.com.

When ready to serve add 1/4 chopped macadamia nuts to the greens then gradually toss with enough dressing to coat. Divide salad on 4 plates and surround the greens with a sprinkle of macadamia nuts. Serve at once.

Note: Sesame vinaigrette dressing is adapted from Elizabeth Andoh's An American Taste of Japan, Morrow, 1985.

BAMBOO SHOOT AND TAT SOI STIR-FRY

I came upon bamboo shoots at Dale & Bette's organic produce stand at the Sag Harbor farmers market. Here is my interpretation of a delicious stir-fry with bamboo shoots. Who knew?

Yield: 4 servings

For the stir-fry sauce
1 large clove garlic, finely chopped, about 1 teaspoon
1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh gingerroot
1 tablespoon light soy sauce
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 teaspoons roasted sesame oil

For the stir-fry
3 bamboo shoots, about 1/2 pound*
Kosher salt
1 tablespoon peanut or canola oil
1 pound tat soi greens, washed and spin-dried
Freshly ground pepper

Place the stir-fry sauce ingredients in a mixing bowl and stir to mix. You will yield approximately 3 tablespoons sauce.

Peel away the outer layers of the bamboo shoots until you reach a firm, ladder-like center. Cut the shoot into one-inch pieces. Bring a small saucepan of water to the boil, add salt to taste and put in the bamboo shoots. Return the water to a boil and simmer the bamboo shoots for 7 o 8 minutes until tender. Drain and dry on paper towels.

In a medium wok or large saute pan swirl the oil to coat the pan and place over medium heat. Add the bamboo shoots and toss the pieces to cook for 2 to 3 minutes. Add 2 tablespoons sauce and toss to mix. Add the greens and toss to mix with the shoots just until the greens are wilted. Add drops of remaining sauce to coat the mixture if necessary. Season with freshly ground pepper; toss to mix and serve warm.

Note: Bamboo shoots are available in early spring and no longer available at the farmers market. If friends are growing bamboo trees – pick them at eight inches for the recipe.

A BITTERSWEET FAREWELL TO THE FAIRWAY

Dear Dan,

I read with interest the Givin' you the Business piece by T.J. Clemente in your May 14 issue and was wondering which Fairway Restaurant he was referring to and how often he visited. Hey, T.J. did you ever receive a T-shirt with "Regular" silk screened on the back of it as so many of us did? Those of us who got one probably had more meals there then were prepared in our own kitchens.

Sad that the towns (both Southampton and East Hampton) found it necessary to cut a deal with management of the golf course and after almost 25 years Fairway, as we all know and love it is now gone.

Should it have been put on, as an item on the local ballot things would never have changed! You can be sure of that...

Just ask all those little tikes who came with their parents and sat at those revolving short counter stools if that wasn't as much fun as the great breakfasts or lunches that Danny, Michael and crew made on the grill. Also for clarification, Red (Dan's dad) or Dan's lovely wife Janice who played host or hostess respectively after you waited on line on the weekend for endless hours never forced anyone to sit there, it was always by choice. Otherwise a table inside or out was yours as soon as one became available.

Danny ran a restaurant that could have been anyone's local candy store, luncheonette, or favorite diner Anywhere, USA. No need for a Culinary Institute graduate to make those great pancakes, burgers, BLT's, backs in those days. Just an experienced short order cook and Fairway had some gems, Danny included. With smiling and hard working wait staff, like Max, Karen, Kirsten and others who were there for years, T.J. do you remember any of them?

Or T.J. were you ever there at 6 a.m., when seat #1 was reserved for a local farmer who delivered his fresh produce daily cause Danny used only home grown local when it was available? Don't ever take that seat or else!

How about when a helicopter landed on farmland across 27 to come to Danny's – a farmer attached his tractor to the chopper so that it couldn't take off since the pilot had landed on private property and the farmer didn't care who it was that had come for breakfast. Remember that one T.J.? That was part of the Fairway experience...

Hope the new folks allow people like Leif Hope to sit there for hours over a cup of coffee planning the annual Artists & Writers game, and that they don't have a problem with Jay-Z who wasn't famous at the time bringing in a large group of young boys and girls for breakfast and then off to hit golf balls. Sure the place got a bit noisy but that's what was so special, it was a place for singles, couples, families and friends.

Danny's Fairway was not a place that was only friendly, nice place to get a quick bite as you wrote. It was an institution and a way of life for a lot of us who were regulars or for those who wanted to experience an exceptional fair-priced meal.

It's sad that now I'll have to be heading out to Montauk Downs to once again experience that special thing that so many of us once had at Poxapoague. Danny is running the restaurant at the golf course. Amen!

I wish the new guy only good luck but they've got big shoes to fill.

Sorry to say that they will never see me as a patron as I'm a "regular" and wear that T-shirt proudly.

THANKS FOR THE LISTINGS THEY WORK!

Dear Dan,

Many thanks for listing our hikes in print and on line. They get results!

We ask people how they found our hikes. Many respond that they get them from Dan's Papers event listings. Dan's gets our message out.

GREED IS KILLING MOTHER EARTH

Dear Dan,

The world as we knew it is over. After reading the article about the cozy government with the oil people it's no wonder it took this long? These people should be sought out and put in jail. The greedy bunch single handedly killed the planet Earth. Lets take over the oil industry because of mismanagement. Let them eat fish, oily fish. What a mess! Who would have ever thought that this would happen? Many people blew the whistle and no one listened. Remember the little Dutch boy with his finger in the dike?

I look back at my life, when I had the energy to make things better I was too busy trying to make a living. Then when I was fat, I wanted to get fatter. Now that I'm very fat, I won't be around to spend it. You can't make this stuff up. It's just too ridiculous. I ask you where are we going? When will we come to our senses?

Thank you for putting this in your "Letters to the Editor." I am going to pound these greedy &&&##&& until they say "Uncle!"

We will come to our senses before 1996, I used to say. — DR

NO COMPASSION FOR THE CARRIAGE HORSES IN NYC!

Dear Dan,

It's time for the jokes to end! If you had the foggiest notion what is the reality for the Manhattan carriage horses, you would not think, never mind say, they "like" the craziness and sometimes pain in which they live...

Here it is:

The NYS Humane Society is in favor of banning the carriage horses from the New York City. The fricking NY Bar Association is in favor of banning the carriage horses from the city. The ASPCA is in favor of banning the carriage horses from the city.

Why? BECAUSE THEY ARE ABUSED by jerks who do not have the first glimmer of kindness in them, who are foreign, who constitute a voting block in Brooklyn, and who enlisted the aid of the Teamsters for the 7.5 hour meeting two years ago to discuss the fate of the horses, and for which I was there the entire time. Do you actually think the horse that died in the Holland Tunnel – there illegally – LIKED his life?

I guess if a horse ever loses his rear end, all I need to do is look to you to find it.

Police Blotter

Writer's note:

Okay. There was way too much unbelievably horrible stuff that happened in the last couple of weeks on the East End, so be prepared, this police blotter isn't going to be funny, not that it ever normally is, although I try, I try.

Rapist Takes A Deal

The young Marine who put up a fake profile on Facebook, flew out to East Hampton and then met up with an underage girl in his car, who then alleged that she was raped by him, has taken a plea deal. John James LaFemina, has received a one-year conditional discharge for the crime and pleaded guilty to endangering the welfare of a child.

Manslaughter for Motorcycle Death

The 19-year-old man who ran from the police on his motorcycle with his pregnant fiancéé sitting passenger and then crashed, killing her and his unboarn baby on the Napeague stretch between Amagansett and Montauk, will be facing a manslaughter charge for the death. Matthew Byank, will be arraigned on June 11 in Suffolk County Criminal Court in Riverhead.

Died Swimming At The Beach

One man is confirmed dead after swimming in an unsupervised area of the beach in Westhampton and another man is still missing as the search continues. The drowning is being investigated by the homicide department of the Suffolk County Police. The two men are from Brooklyn. Deng Zheng, 26, was pronounced dead after CPR was given to him by lifeguards at the scene. His friend Xiangyong Chen, who is 31, is still missing. Helicopter searches and volunteer searches as well as police and ambulance searches have found nothing.

Soldier From Shelter Island Is Killed In Afghanistan

Army 1st Lieutenant Joseph Theinert, from Shelter Island and who was just 24 years old, was killed in action in Afghanistan. His unit was the subject of an ambush, and received heavy gunfire, that drew them into an area that was rigged with improvised explosive devices, or IEDs, which is the cause of the majority of fatalities and dramatic injuries in the war in Afghanistan. It was reported that he was trying to dismantle one of the IED's in the area and it went off, killing him. Throughout the Hamptons, many flags were raised at half-mast in his honor.

Dead Body Confirmed

The dead body that washed ashore in Amagansett has been confirmed to be the missing Chinese kayaker that was reported missing before the body had washed ashore. Fengquan Guan, who was 32, and is originally from China, was the man's name.
